Administration Asks Giant Banks to Accept Unneeded R.F.C. Loans

WASHINGTON — The Roosevelt Administration is secretly putting pressure on the largest banks in the country to accept unwanted and unneeded loans from the R. F. C.

Among those being solicited are the Mellon banks in Pittsburgh, the Chase, National City and Guaranty Trust, of New York City, and the Bank of Italy, of California.

There is a reason for this policy:

The Deposit Insurance Act becomes effective January 1. The Treasury is now examining all banks, member as well as non-member. Many banks, while solvent, are not up to par in liquidity.

To enable them to meet requirements, the government proposes to make them loans in the form of purchases of preferred stock. The R. F. C. believes only $150,000,000 will be necessary for this purpose, but is prepared to spend a billion.

This is a legitimate measure. It means safeguarding billions of dollars of depositors' money. But a question of public psychology enters.

The R. F. C. has to make a monthly report to Congress on its loans to banks. These reports are made public. Where a bank is shown to have received government money, doubts and suspicions are immediately raised against it, in some cases by its competitors.

To remove all stigma from R. F. C. loans, the Administration proposes to have a number of the giant banks, about whose stability there is no doubt, take government money.

Hull Has a Word for It

Lobbyists now swamping the Capitol more than at any other time in history have worked out different categories for the New Dealers. They are classified under "Friendly" or "Hostile."

The friendliest New Dealer is Colonel H. W. Waite, administrator of Public Works under Secretary Ickes. Waite's office swarms with lobbyists, all wanting a nibble at the fund. He patiently sees them all, calls them his friends, will not even reveal their names. Just the opposite is Waite's chief, hard-bitten Harold Ickes. His office also teems with lobbyists, but he dislikes them, shows it in his conversation.

But the man who hates them most is Cordell Hull, dry, angular Secretary of State. Sec. Hull has a name for lobbyists which cannot be printed here. It's the solid, Biblical name for bad women. The expletive, coming from the usually reserved Secretary of State, is expressive and to the point.

Far-Reaching Step

There is a great deal more to the public works emergency Housing Corporation than appears on the surface.

In the housing construction field it has practically unlimited powers. Not only can it build or remodel housing accommodations, but the corporation has absolute authority to fix the basis on which they may be let. For example, there is nothing in the law to prevent the government from making such quarters available to the unemployed free of rent.

Rebuff

General W. W. Atterbury, head of the Pennsylvania Railroad and staunch friend of Herbert Hoover, had his $50,000 salary slashed to $30,000 at government behest. Now he is doing a little nose-thumbing at the Roosevelt Administration.

When the President announced his plan of having the government finance the purchase of 800,000

CUBAN TROOPS ATTACK FORTRESS HELD BY REBELS; FIGHTING HEAVY

Martin Declares War in Effort to End Strife

LINER IS BARRED

'Fight to Finish' Expected Today

HAVANA, Nov. 9.—In a decisive effort to bring an end to Cuba's latest revolutionary uprising, forces loyal to President Ramon Grau San Martin today opened a bombardment of Atrates fortress, rebel headquarters.

Small field guns were brought into action as troops sought to dislodge the insurgents, who announced they would stand their ground until the last man was killed.

Two civilians were killed and five wounded in the exchange of firing. They were struck by bullets while congregated near the plant of the Cuban Electric company, whose boiler room was hit by a shell, injuring a workman.

The Munson liner Munargo which arrived today was not permitted to dock because of the firing. Employees of the Pan-American Airways evacuated their offices in the harbor.

Mobilized by declaration of a "state of war," which invoked martial law, federal cavalry and infantry took up posts opposite the fortress and cleared the nearby waterfront of all residents and pedestrians.

Fears were felt the battle would add heavily to the list of casualties, set by the government as 22 dead and 75 wounded.

It was feared shells may cripple Havana's light service. The electric plant is almost in the direct line of fire between the federal emplacements and the rebel stronghold, an ancient thick-walled fortress built 150 years ago.

The insurgents evacuated previous headquarters and concentrated in the fortress, built high on the top of a rocky hill overlooking the harbor, when the federal launched a mopping up of army camps and barracks captured by the rebels at the outbreak of the revolt.

FOR DE CESPEDES

Leaders of the uprising are attempting to unseat Grau San Martin and restore to power former provisional President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, who was appointed immediately after the downfall of Gerardo Machado.

KENTUCKY IN WET PARADE

Margin is About 3-2; Utah Becomes 36th State To Oust Prohibition.

By International News Service

Of the last six states which have balloted on the question of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, four voted overwhelmingly for repeal and two against repeal.

For repeal: Utah, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kentucky.

Against: North Carolina, and South Carolina.

Latest figures:

Utah — for repeal 101,103, against 63,248.

Ohio — for 1,433,157, against 578,947.

Pennsylvania — For 1,470,987, against 469,133.

Kentucky—340 precincts out of 4,204; for repeal 79,127, against 56,423.

North Carolina—1,488 precincts out of 1,831; for 109,660, against 259,000.

South Carolina—1,028 precincts out of 1,220; for 33,220, against 36,570.

Regardless of the action of the two southern states—first of the states to start a dry column—Prohibition is dead. Utah became the 36th state to vote for repeal, thus providing the necessary two-thirds majority. The effective date of repeal of the eighteenth amendment is December 5.

SNOW FALLS HERE

Winter came to Circleville today with low temperatures and a strong wind blowing. The temperature at noon, according to Dr. H. R. Clarke, was 34 degrees, five higher than in the morning.

A partition suit of William D. Murray against Nellie Nelson, Sarah Lucille Welch and Paul H. and Inez Murray has been filed in common pleas court by Max C. Seyfert, Jr. and Meeker Terwilliger, attorneys for the plaintiff.

Where Were You When Armistice Was Signed?

Editor's Note:—With interest in Armistice Day growing as a result of preparations for the celebration of the 15th anniversary of the war's close, a column is conducted Thursday and will also be printed Saturday of answers to the above statement.

CHARLES H. RADCLIFF: Over the hill from Luneyville, across the Meuse river from Stenay, France, in the Argonne woods. Had been there 21 days. Orders to cease firing at 11 o'clock and about a half hour before 11 several boys went out in the open hunting souvenirs when a German plane came over killing three of them. Several were wounded and one was loaded into an ambulance, when about a quarter of a mile back shrapnel killed him.

Son Succeeds Slain Afghan

KABUL, Afghanistan, Nov. 9.—Mourning the assassination of King Nadir Khan, stable boy who became the world's most absolute despot, Afghanistan turned its allegiance today to the slain ruler's 17-year-old son.

The son was proclaimed monarch immediately after his father's death at "the hands of a traitor," and was enthroned as King Zahir Shah. The government reported the country orderly.

Nadir Khan was proclaimed King in October, 1929, after fighting his way to the throne. He had been minister to France from 1924 to 1928, and before that a soldier of fortune.

that no one took very seriously the report of a French messenger that the war was over. It was not until later in the day when the expected casualties did not arrive in the hospital (for the infantry was expected to go over the top that day) that we began to believe the report; the next day we celebrated.

HENRY MASON: Camp Sherman, on K. P. duty peeling spuds.

W. B. CADY: Camp Pike, Kansas—Threw away mess kits, tore down tents and celebrated in general.

DR. H. D. JACKSON: Marching from the front after being relieved. Had heard rumors of Armistice but no one believed it. At 11 o'clock the roar of the big guns ceased and still we did not believe it. That night appearance of many open fires was sure confirmation.

BRYAN CUSTER: Out of my head with flu somewhere at Camp Sherman and didn't know a thing about the Armistice.

PAUL H. BETZ: Broadway and 42nd, New York. Was stationed at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, headquarters for the coast defense of New York harbor. When the news came everybody broke for Times Square and how that town did celebrate. Every man on the post was A. W. O. L. for two days.

JAMES STOUT: Delivering supplies to the front in Belgium.

H. B. TIMMONS: Western front in Belgium with 79 truck loads of ammunition; Runner overtook us on motorcycle to order us to unload ammunition and proceed to front line trenches, empty for further instructions. Runner also told us he had passed the Kaiser two miles up the road evacuating Germany. C. O. in front line ordered us to take him and two men to Paris, and we all had a two day champagne barrage.

CLAUDE ROBINSON: Just out of hospital and was in Circleville on sick furlough.

GUY PETTIT: Chaumont, France, close to Stenay on ammunition trains hauling ammunition to the front at night and was in quarters at 11 o'clock.

ORIN W. DREISBACH: On the rifle range at Camp Sherman.

BELL WILL NAMES WIDOW, CHILDREN

Son Receives $1,500 For Further Education; Written Nov. 4, 1929.

The will of the late Joseph M. Bell, Northridge-rd, filed in probate court Wednesday, names the widow, Mrs. L. Florence Bell, a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Bell, daughter of Port William, and a son, Joseph F., a minor, beneficiaries.

The estate is estimated to be worth $8,300, of which $6,800 is real estate. Mrs. Bell has been named executrix without bond.

The daughter is to receive $2,250, the son $2,250 plus $1,500 for his education and the remainder goes to the widow.

O. S. Howard, R. G. Colville and C. P. Heiskell are appraisers. The will was written Nov. 4, 1929, and witnessed by H. B. Weaver and W. C. Morris.

Ray W. Davis is attorney for the estate.

2 TRIALS BOOKED

Clerk of Courts A. L. Wilder, Thursday, was sending notices to petit jurors to report for duty Monday when trial of the suit of Etta Davis, Columbus, against J. H. Wright, of Kingston, for damages as the result of an auto wreck, is scheduled to begin.

Another suit in connection with the same wreck is scheduled before Judge J. W. Adkins two days later. It is the suit of Sheldon Steele, Columbus, against Mr. Wright.

Hamilton and Kramer, Columbus, and E. L. Crist are attorneys for the plaintiffs and Ballard and Hensel represent Wright.

Auditor's Office Makes Distribution Through Various Districts

FIGURES COMPARED

Circleville Schools Receive $28,793 Amount

The semi-annual distribution of real and public utility taxes was made to the various taxing districts, Thursday, by the county auditor's office. The distribution amounted to $331,838.30.

The money was segregated as follows:

General taxes, $321,938.51; Inheritance, $8,570.92; Depository int., $1,328.87.

The total amount charged on the 1932 abstract amounted to $843,707.51 and $318,225 was accounted for in the February collection and $321,938.51 was accounted for in the August collection, making a total collection for the tax year of 1932, $640,163.51, or 75.87 per cent.

The total distribution Thursday of $321,938.51, compared to August, 1932, amounting to $335,760.49, shows a drop of $13,821.98.

WET MARGIN IS 853,210

County Home Rule Carries By Less Than 10,000; Other Issues Voted in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 8.—Ohio voters balloted prohibition into the discard by a majority of 853,210, complete unofficial figures revealed today.

Final unofficial figures tabulated by Secretary of State George S. Myers gave the following results on the prohibition question:

For repeal of the 18th amendment, 1,435,157; against repeal, 579,947.

For repeal of the state prohibition amendment, 1,245,186; against repeal, 573,741.

On other state-wide issues, complete unofficial returns were:

For 10 mill tax limit, 974,794; against, 658,899.

For county home rule, 847,000; against, 737,886.

For old age pension, 1,385,994; against, 525,756.

On the basis of these returns, the following majorities were tabulated: For national repeal, 853,210; for state prohibition repeal, 671,445; for 10-mill tax limit, 315,895; for county home rule, 109,114; for old age pensions, 860,238.

STRIKERS DESTROY THIRD RAIL BRIDGE

PORTSMOUTH, Ia., Nov. 9.—Flames destroyed the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad bridge one mile south of here early today in what authorities said was another effort by farm strike pickets to prevent farm-to-market shipments.

The fire burned away most of the bridge superstructure before sheriff's deputies and railroad hands arrived on the scene.

It was the third railroad bridge destroyed in the state this week in the farm strike.

Sheriff George E. Jensen said the fire undoubtedly was set by farm strike pickets. The sheriff said he would file a complete report with Gov. Clyde Hering.

Won New Trial

Sentenced to life imprisonment in 1929, after a jury had found him guilty of murdering his wife at Fort Riley, Kan., Major Charles A. Shepard, U. S. A., has won a new trial, which has been ordered by the U. S. Supreme Court. Shepard, an army doctor, was charged with slaying his wife (inset) with a poisoned highball.

STATE FAVORS ASHVILLE JOBS

Boulay Sends Applications For Public Works Money Into Washington.

LIST TWO PROJECTS

Million and Half Asked In Number of Projects.

Applications for ten construction projects in Ohio, with a total estimated cost of $1,425,465 today were submitted to Washington for approval of the federal public works administration by L. A. Boulay, engineer of the state advisory board on public works.

Included in the projects were two for the village of Ashville.

One was for sewerage and sewage treatment; cost $40,000; loan asked $29,130; grant asked, $10,870.

One for waterworks; cost $60,000; loan asked, $45,582; grant asked, $14,418.

Largest of the projects, which all have been approved by the state board, is the Mill Creek intercepter sewer in Cincinnati. A grant of $140,500 to help finance this $507,465 project is requested. No loan is asked.

Another is for the Muddy Creek sanitary sewer in Hamilton-co. with a loan of $295,500 and a grant of $73,800 asked. The estimated cost is $369,300.

Other projects include work at Cheviot, Beaver Dam, Quaker City, Jackson Center, Oak Hill and Hamilton-twp, Franklin-co.

WASHINGTON C. H. NEEDS FINAL COUNT

Mayor Worrell, Defeated By Two Votes In Official Tally, May Ask Recount.

WASHINGTON, C. H., Nov. 9.—Threatening to demand a recount, Mayor G. H. Worrell, Republican, defeated by re-election Tuesday by two votes, today awaited the results of the official election tabulation by the board of elections.

Worrell defeated by Peter H. Curtin, a Democrat, and a former mayor of Washington, C. H.

Unless the official count, which is expected to be completed tonight, greatly increases Curtin's lead, Worrell will demand a recount of the votes, he asserted today. He indicated also that he may demand an investigation of rumors that non-residents voted in the election.

JEFFRIES LOSES

Lawrence U. Jeffries, son of Mrs. T. F. Jeffries, was defeated for Lancaster solicitor, where he is a practicing attorney, by Esther H. Brocker, Republican incumbent. The vote was 3,476 against 2,876.

MANY NEW FACES TO APPEAR NEXT YEAR IN CITY OFFICIAL FAMILY

Cady Silent on Appointees; New Mayor to Also Head Show

GOELLER HAS JOB

Important Chairmanships Vacant on January 1

Circleville voters, Thursday, had sufficiently recovered from the Tuesday election to realize that a drastic change will be seen in the city's government when newly-elected officials assume office next January 1.

They elected a new mayor, four new councilmen out of seven, a new solicitor and one of five members of the board of education.

The new mayor will be William E. Cady who returns Democratic rule to the city after six years. His first duties, of course, will be appointment of successors to J. Wallace Crist and A. J. Lyle as safety and service directors. Mr. Crist became safety director when Mr. Hedges began his last term. The safety director succeeded Mack Parrett, Jr., who served after the late Cassius Clay resigned. Mr. Lyle was named service director when L. E. Miller resigned.

CADY KEEPS 'MUM'

Mr. Cady has not even 'inked' who his appointees will be and he plans to withhold any information until shortly before he enters office. The new mayor will also hold one of the city's most important jobs, president of the Pumpkin Show society.

The new council will be John C. Goeller, president; C. O. Leist, first ward; Julius Helweggen, second ward; Dan T. Ryan, third ward; William M. Reid, fourth ward; Ben H. Gordon, W. F. Baker and F. A. Marion, councilmen-at-large. The former three were re-elected. Clark Will was defeated Tuesday in the third ward vote and Tull M. Barnes was defeated in the primary by Mr. Reid for the Democratic nomination. E. S. Neuding did not run for re-election as councilman-at-large and Mack Parrett, Jr., although he led the Republican councilmen, was not re-elected. Other Republican candidates for councilman-at-large were R. L. Brehmer and Hildebrand Jones.

LEAGUE IS JUBILANT

The Circleville Citizens' league claims a victory for municipal ownership of utilities in the election. The league opposed Mr. Will, Mr. Brehmer and Mr. Jones. All councilmen who have been elected are favorable to municipal ownership if an effort to obtain lower rates from utilities is ineffective.

Carl C. Leist, son of C. A. Leist, Democratic chairman, will succeed Paul E. Adkins as solicitor. Adkins did not seek re-election and Leist had no opposition in either primary or general election. Adkins is completing his third term.

The new board of education will be comprised of Mrs. Lillian W. Moore, Lawrence Goeller, Charles H. May, Robert G. Colville and C. R. Barnhart. The only new member is Mrs. Moore who ran well to oust Joseph R. Noecker from the board, where he had served for a number of years.

Mr. Goeller was re-elected while the other three terms will not expire for two years.

All told it was a 'hot' election and the changes will be carefully watched by residents of the city.

NEEDS CHAIRMEN

John C. Goeller, re-elected president of council without opposition, faces a task with the new council. Several important committees will be left rudderless with the withdrawal of E. S. Neuding, the defeat of Mr. Will, Mr. Barnes and Mr. Parrett. Neuding is chairman of the important finance and appropriation committee and has been for a number of years. Besides that he is chairman of Berger hospital committee. Mr. Will is his right-hand man on the finance committee, thus leaving two vacancies to be filled. Mr. Will, besides his work on the finance committee, is also chairman of the railroads, telephones and franchises committee. Mr. Barnes is head of the important safety committee and Parrett heads the committee on ordinances and libraries.

BANKS TO CLOSE

All Circleville Banks will be closed Saturday in observance of Armistice Day, a national holiday.

Rife and Board Busy

Election Group's Task Mountain-like; Makes Final Count Friday.

The board of elections, Thursday, was engaged in one of the most difficult tasks it has attempted in recent years. The task was checking the vote of all the city and county precincts in preparation to taking an official count. S. T. Rife chairman of the board, declared during the day that the official count would probably not be known before late Friday.

He and the other board members finished checking the tally for delegates to the constitution convention, their first job, at about 10 a. m. Thursday. The other tabulations were to be made next with all the state issues included.

It is believed the official count will have little effect on the Circleville vote. The board's tabulation on Circleville, which precedes the official count, gave William E. Cady 1749 votes against 1404 for Mayor B. T. Hedges. That makes the Democrat

TOM MOONEY AGAIN SEEKS HIGH COURT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Based upon new legal grounds, an appeal will be made to the supreme court within a month to free Tom Mooney, noted labor leader, from San Quentin prison, Cal., it was announced today.

The second appeal to the high court will be made possible through developments which accompanied the trial last year of Mooney upon an old indictment for complicity in the tragic San Francisco Preparedness parade bombing 17 years ago.

It is that conviction of a person on perjured testimony is a denial of due process of law as guaranteed by the federal constitution.

The new step in the long effort to free Mooney, whose case has attracted world-wide attention has been investigated by agencies of two presidents, is being formulated by John F. Finerty of this city and Frank Walsh of New York as counsel for the Mooney defense committee.

After Mooney was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment successive appeals were made, the last to the supreme court but a writ of review was denied.

When Mooney was brought to trial on a separate, old indictment for the death of one person in the Preparedness parade last year, it was contended that Mooney was brought to his fate through perjured testimony.

WALNUT-TWP SCHOOL NEWS

Walnut News is on the way. Things that happen every day. Themes, honor and attendance, too. What they do we write for you.

The lower hall is more attractive since the class pictures have been removed from the office and hung there.

Jennie Horton, '32, visited the high school, Wednesday, Nov. 1. Misses Freda Allen and Beatrice Lynn and Mrs. Alice Hall visited the school Friday, Nov. 3.

No wonder the orchestra and Glee Club members couldn't keep in tune with the instrument that gave them their pitch. The piano in the music room was tuned by George Peters of Ashville, Thursday.

The classrooms of the school have been labeled in order to enable the visitors next week to find their way about the building.

As an afterthought we believe this will also be a great help to the poor Freshmen who are continually getting lost and being led to their classes.

Girls' basketball allsquad will miss very much this year, Dorothy Updyke, who graduated, also Betty DeLong and Frances Hartman, who are finishing their schooling at Columbus, North.

We have a number of Freshmen girls participating this year also Ruth Dunkel, a former student of Circleville.

The boys held their first athletic meeting Wednesday. The new officers were elected for the year. They are as follows:

Wayne Brown, president; George Scholer, vice-president; Link Brown, secretary and treasurer.

An old bill was brought up before the organization by Mr. Sponser and was decided that it would be cleared up.

The fee for the membership was set the same as last year, this effects only those coming into the association. All the standing members have their dues to pay to hold their membership.

Walnut is organizing into class basketball teams. This plan was decided upon so more boys and girls will get to play basketball. This will help to break the monopoly for those who hoped to make the team but didn't.

Non-Stop Globe Dash

A non-stop flight around the world in three and a half days is the ambitious program planned by Captain Bennett Griffin, noted American flier. He said he will use a plane "of unusual design" and is promised the cooperation of the U. S. Army and Navy. He'll make the attempt next May.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

The Parable of the Snail

By IRVIN S. COBB

TWO members of a colored labor battalion in France were languidly filling a shell hole behind the lines of the A. E. F. Along came an officer who spoke to them in harsh words. When he had passed on, one of the pair, relapsing from temporary activity back again into his regular dreamy state, remarked:

"Suttin' in a mouty free cursin' w'ile man, dat young lieutenant. Suttin' does know how to use strong language w'en he craves for somebody to show him some speed. Puts me in mind of a parable."

"What's a parable?" inquired his companion, sitting down on the edge of the excavation in order to give his entire attention to listening.

"I'm goin' to tell you, buddy. Dis yere parable is 'bout a snail. Now dis yere snail belonged to our fambly. We kep' him fur a pet 'round de house. After w'ile he got so he could un'erstand ev'rythin' you said to him 'an could tawk back, jes' same ez a Christian. I reckon dey never wuz no likelier snail 'en w'at dis snail wuz."

"Well, one mawmin' Pappy was taken down with a powerful mizry in his insides. He's feared he's gwine die, den an' dere. He tell Mammy send fur de doctor right away. Mammy run to de do' to call one of us chillun but we is all off skylarkin' somewhars an' 'tain't nobody in sight but de fambly snail, w'ich is settin' on de do' step, sunnin' hisself. So she say to him, she say:

"Run quick fur de doctor, right away! Pappy's got de cramps an' seems lak, ef we don't get help soon he gwine cramp hisself into a hard knot!"

"All right," de snail say, "all right. I'll go. You go back inside de house an' look after po' Pappy an' I'll go fur de doctor."

"So Mammy she went back an' start in rubbin' Pappy's stomach. One hour pass, two hours pass an' Pappy don't get no better an' they ain't hair nur hide of no doctor comin'."

"Pappy he keep on moanin' and groanin' an' carryin' on. Mammy she keep on rubbin'. She ain't stop to cook no vittles fur dinner; jes' keep on rubbin'."

"Twelve o'clock come an' still no sign of de doctor, an' Pappy gittin' wuss off all de time. Then, purty soon it's goin' on one o'clock. After 'awile mo' it's gettin to be goin' on fo' o'clock. Jes' befo' dark Pappy, he say:

"I jes' natchelly can't stand dis no longer. Run out in de yard an' see ef de doctor ain't comin' yet."

"So Mammy go to de do' and lo an' behole, dere is dat snail moseyin' along de walk an' not mo'n ha'f way to de front gate. He been all dat time gettin' dat fur."

"Mammy she's plum outdone. She yell out at him: 'W'y you lazy, wuthless, no 'count snail, ain't I tell you early dis mawmin' dat po' Pappy mouty nigh daid, an' ain't I ast you go fur de doctor, an' ain't you promise me you'd start fo' twi'ith, an' now, dog-gone you, yere you is, not traveled mo'n twenty feet! What kind of a way is dat to ack?'"

"De snail turn 'round an' rear back an' look Mammy in de eye an' he say to her:

"Lissen yere, woman, you tawk to me day way, I won't go a' tall!"

There will also be an inter-class tournament to be played in the spring some time after the inner school tournament.

Each class is to have a team with the players picked from their respective classes.

The referees for these games will be chosen from members of the faculty.

This plan has been sanctioned by the board of education.

The schedule and managers will be announced later.

The varsity squad is anxious for practice to begin.

Their schedule will be made out November 11.

Who doesn't enjoy speeches? Especially when they are not long and dry. This is the treat the American Literature class had Friday, Nov. 3. Each member gave a subject and some other class member gave his idea of a good answer. There was every subject that ranged from "My First Date With a Girl" to "My Experience in Alaska."

Gladys Hickman and Elizabeth Reber participated in the radio audition held at the Clifton Theatre, Wednesday night, Nov. 1.

The orchestra played at the chicken supper Friday, Nov. 3. Other selections were, The Guitar Trio, composed of Cecil Gray, Merl Kinser and Howard Waits, who played several numbers.

Ethel May and George Peters played piano solos and Hugh Huffer played a trumpet solo.

At Walnut, November 9, don't forget they are giving a nifty radiolette.

The Economics class is just completing a study of money, its value and physical characteristics, its denominations and the various economic laws concerning money. A close watch is being kept upon the activities of the federal government in its gold-buying program, and, its effect upon commodity prices, as well as the reaction of European countries upon our monetary policy.

France especially, since she is the only important because she still clings to gold as a monetary standard. The Economics class will next take up Credit and Banking.

The law class is fairly launched on a study of negotiable instruments, which include notes, drafts, bills of exchange, trade acceptances and checks. Who is a holder in due course? What are his rights? What are his liabilities? What must a negotiable instrument contain? What must it not contain? These are a few of the many important questions under consideration.

The science class is studying photo synthesis—the process by which green plants manufacture their own food from air, water and sunlight.

The English class is studying Treasure Island, that story by Robert Louis Stevenson which critics chose to be the best boys' story ever written. In addition, the agreement of verbs with their subjects will also be studied.

Work is progressing on "Radiolette," the musical comedy skit being presented by the Walnut Glee Club under the direction of Mrs. Puffer, assisted by Mr. Drum.

Freshmen and Sophomore classes have been spending the past two weeks studying project account. Project accounting teaches the boys how to make the proper entries and keep an accurate record of all activities taking place during the course of project. Records are not with value unless they are summarized and then antilized, after the project is antilized the boys have available figures that tell them what their labor income is; returns per dollars worth of feed, feed cost per 100 pounds of live weight produced, total cost per 100 pounds produced and labor income which is the main item of interest to all boys.

Home Economics—One has been studying milk and its importance in the diet, composition and rules for the care of milk in the home, breakfast cereals and breads. The class is also making quick breads.

The second year Home Economics class is working on the construction of their cotton and wool dresses. Fitting is being stressed. Each girl is held responsible for the fit of her partners.

Boys' days absence, 14 days or 96 per cent attendance. Girls, 13 days absence or 97 per cent attendance. This has been the best week of the year for attendance.

Ralph and Foyat McNeal have withdrawn and are going to enter at Ashville.

A spelling contest is being held in the eighth grade. The room is divided into nine, five-pupil teams. Since there are 47 in the grade this leaves us two extra for substitutes. The groups are chosen by lot. The winning group this week was composed of: Robert Balthaser, June Armstrong, Jean Harber, Belva Merritt, Jay Hay. Some practical work in arithmetic was done in class this week. Several wagon box dimensions were sent in to find how much corn they would hold.

In an English exercise we finished a story which was only partly given to us. Jacqueline Lewis had the best ending for the story.

We have two new pictures donated by June Armstrong, one of our eighth graders. They are: "The Song of a Lark" and "The Angelus."

We have 31 pupils who have neither been absent or tardy this year.

The seventh grade has a bulletin board on which the members post interesting articles, keeping alert on new inventions, the highlights of history and current events. A current events note book is kept in which the weekly magazine is posted.

This week Norma Coon has the most one hundredths in spelling. Boyd Mettler and Roy Ruh have the most one hundredths in Arithmetic.

The room is taking part in the P. T. A. Friday evening, Nov. 10. Program: Miss Weaver's room is going to give a part of the program, the orchestra will play, Helen McCord will play a solo solo, and Mr. Brown will give awards.

For the past few weeks the following pupils have perfect attendance: Elsi Barr, Gertrude Barr, Ruth Bowman, Mary Clark, Donald Fisher, Doris Frazier, Vernon Garrett, Joe Hedges, Harriet Heffner, Thelma Hines, Paul Hoover, Thelma Johnson, Donald Kern,

PERRY-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

The Prince of Peace contest will be held at the church Sunday evening, Nov. 11 at eight o'clock. The orations are as follows:

The Red Juggernaut, Martha French.

Mars or God, Martha Wright.

There is no Peace, Margaret Turner.

Education for World Citizenship, Helen Skinner.

The fifth grade had perfect attendance last week.

An outside basket ball court has been made. It is now possible in good weather, for both boys and girls to practice at the same time.

With both outdoor and indoor practice we should be able to develop two very good teams.

The chapel program presented Tuesday morning under the direction of Miss Hauman was enjoyed very much.

The program which was of an Armistice character was as follows:

Song: America, audience.

Story, Glenn Conrad.

Prayer, Addie Ruth Skinner.

Scripture reading, John Lamb.

Prince of Peace orations, Martha French, Martha Wright, Margaret Turner.

Heroes of Peace, Fern Bentley.

The Hallowe'en party sponsored by the Atlanta F. T. A. on Monday evening, Oct. 13 was a complete success.

The winners of the various contest were as follows: Martha French dressed as a pirate was given the prize for the prettiest costume. Sara Oglesbee and Hazel Chilcote as death angels had the most original costumes. Elzie Radcliff won first and Elbert Dennis won second prize in the old fiddlers contest. The fortune teller was kept very busy and the fish pond was well patronized. The lunch stand did a good business. The auditorium, decorated with fodder and pumpkin faces lighted with candles presented a very spooky appearance.

The orchestra is progressing very well with the new books which were recently purchased.

A class in instrumental music has been organized by Frank Hickman of Lancaster. Seven took lessons last week. Several others are expected to start taking soon.

Spelling honor roll: Second grade—Mary Stevenson.

Third grade—Ruby Bentley, Hazel Hatfield and Mary Jane Downing.

Fourth grade—Imogene Canterbury, Marlyn Campbell, Beulah Self, Martha Arnold and Jeannette Baker.

Fifth grade—Paul Mills, John McCollister, Mary Hamilton, Leroy Hamilton and Stella Mae

joyed very much. The program which was of an Armistice character was as follows:

HIGHWAY PATROL TO START NEXT WEEK

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Acting under orders of O. W. Merrell, state highway director, 60 members of the Ohio highway patrol tonight will break a six-week period of intensive training prior to beginning active duty next Wednesday.

Trained and equipped at an initial cost of $55,000, the patrol represents Ohio's first step toward the enforcement of state speed and driver-age laws and the control of overloaded and improperly registered vehicles.

Following a week-end vacation, the men will re-assemble at Camp Perry on Monday morning to receive final equipment and instructions. The swearing-in ceremonies and review will be held on Wednesday morning, after which the men will leave for their stations in the six state districts.

District headquarters will be located in Toledo, Ravenna, Sidney, Delaware, Cambridge, and Chillicothe. Three substations have been established in each district. They are located as follows: Toledo district, Defiance, Findlay, and Bellevue; Ravenna district, Medina, Salem, and Geneva; Sidney district, Middletown, Lima, and Springfield; Delaware district, Marion, Mansfield, and Newark; Cambridge district, Wilmington, Portsmouth and Athens.

Director Merrell estimated that the initial cost of the patrol has been more than made up by the owners of improperly registered vehicles who have hurried to make correct registrations prior to the functioning of the patrol.

Study Plan for "American Eden"

A plan for an America where youth would do all the work and age would live is being studied by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. The idea, envisioned by a 71-year-old woman, Mrs. Preston Martin, wife of a college professor, calls for a conscripted army of youth 12,000,000 strong between the ages of 18 and 26. This army would do all the nation's work and supply food, clothing, shelter and other necessities of life for all over 26—the retirement age. However, luxuries would have to be earned by those desiring them.

ATLANTA PAINTER DIES IN HOSPITAL

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at the Atlanta M. E. church. Rev. H. O. Harbaugh officiating for Ernest Strope, 55, painter and well known through the community, who died in Columbus hospital, Wednesday, without regaining consciousness after being found in an automobile in his garage a week ago.

Mr. Strope is survived by his widow and two daughters, Miss Velma at home and Mrs. George Betts of Atlanta.

Interment will be in Williamsport cemetery.

WORLD'S FAIR TO OPEN NEXT JUNE 1

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—A century of Progress exposition, now on its last week for this year, will reopen on June 1, 1934, with a collection of new shows and exhibits, President Rufus C. Dawes announced today.

Legislation necessary for reopening the world's fair has been assured to the management, Dawes declared.

Maj. Gen. Lenox R. Lohr disclosed that alterations will begin next spring when new lighting effects and new exhibits will be installed and the grounds rearranged.

Business and industrial leaders had urged the fair's continuation next season in the belief that it would assist in plans for national recovery.

PICKENS ON AIR

Ferd M. Pickens, district deputy grand exalted ruler of the Elks lodge, made a splendid radio address Wednesday evening on "Elksdom." He also outlined a program for an Elks night in Columbus, Saturday, to which local Elks and their families are invited.

Carrying It To Extremes

By IRVIN S. COBB

TO BE orthodox, in every story in which a policeman figures, the said policeman should be an Irishman. Any departure from this is a violation of the traditions. Nevertheless, and all the conventions to the contrary, notwithstanding, the hero of this story is a policeman and not an Irishman. He is Scotch.

In my own defense let me state that there are such things in New York as policemen who are Scotch. For instance, I know a lieutenant at an uptown station-house who has an accent which suggests hot oat-men gruel running out of a narrow-mouthed jug. But our hero here was not a lieutenant, but a partolman walking post in a Bronx precinct. However, before we introduce him it is necessary first to present the other principal character of the little tragedy.

That other character was Irish, but he was not on the force. He was an elderly civilian who had stopped on a stroll to watch a job of street repairing.

Three stories up above his head a housekeeper placed a large platter of corned beef and cabbage—a combination affectionately known in New York as "Red Mike"—on a front window ledge of her tenement. The ledge had a slant to it. The platter slid off and descending, struck the Hibernian bystander squarely on the head, bruising his scalp and covering him with the contents of the heavy dish.

He gave a loud cry of pain and astonishment and sank to the sidewalk. He was not badly hurt but he had suffered a severe shock. As sympathetic onlookers lifted him to a sitting posture the Scotch partolman ranged up alongside and took in the sight.

"Well," he said, "I kenneed that all Irishmen were fond of corned beef and cabbage, but, laddy, you're the first one I ever knew to decoraw himself with it."

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NOTES

Jimmy Plum of the fourth grade has transferred to the Mt. Sterling schools.

Our fourth grade is enjoying the use of its new library table. We have magazines on child life, news of the day, nature study, and travel.

In spelling we have been having a daily contest to see whether the boys have the most 100's or the girls. The girls have been in the lead so far.

The 4th grade has been writing stories on the topic, "Preparation for Winter." We have posted the best ones on our bulletin board. Later we will make a booklet to keep on our library table.

In geography we have been taking an imaginary trip from New York to San Francisco on the Lincoln Highway. We have made maps and put in the important rivers, cities, and other points of interest.

On Tuesday of Hallowe'en week grade 4 enjoyed a Hallowe'en party during the lunch hour, from 12 until 1 o'clock. We had Jack O-Lanterns, we dressed in costumes and had lunch together as each person brought his lunch to school.

We have chosen Wednesday morning exercises as the time for the prevention discussion. We bring in newspaper clippings telling of fire disasters and discuss these prevention.

The following fourth grade pupils have been neither absent nor tardy for the first two months of school: Nellie Burcham, Everett Costlow, Dora Cramblit, Mary Jane Higley, Ruby Meadows, Elmer Neff, William Pettibone, Eleanor Sark, Herbert Seymour, Joseph Staley, Florence Tignor, Dorothy Wellington.

The 7th and 8th grade boys will begin basket ball practice next week. They desire to schedule games with 7th and 8th grade teams of nearby schools.

The third grade enjoyed a Hallowe'en Party last Tuesday afternoon. Pupils of the third grade who have been on the Honor Roll for the first two months of the school year are: Mary Wilkins, Joan Tosca, Frank Hingle, Viola Ward

Betty Hunt and Isabelle Hallen. The sixth grade chose Junior Neff as their new librarian for the month of November.

The first grade children invited their mother to attend their Hallowe'en party Friday afternoon which was given in honor of the second grade. There were ten mothers present.

The first grade are studying different kinds of animals, in connection with this project they are constructing an animal book.

The Juniors chose class rings this week from samples submitted by different companies.

The class wishes to thank Mrs. Bowers for the flowers she lent them for decorating the Junior Room.

For the past few weeks the chemistry classes have been performing extra experiments. These consist of Natural Colors, Freezing a tumbler to a block of wood something from nothing, burning air, sympathetic ink, preparing gold, beautiful crystal gardens, variety of flavors, combustion of phosphorus in Potassium chlorate carrying a flame in hands, dust explosion, serpent egg, burning water, a chemical sunset, trick sign painting, red, blue, yellow green and purple fire, blowing soap bubbles with hydrogen. These experiments performed by various chemicals proved very interesting as well as educational.

The Home Economics class was organized Nov. 3. The following officers were elected. President—Lila Hiles, vice president—Evelyn Gerhart, secretary and treasurer—Charlotte Reese, and program committee—Ruth Hoffman, Pauline Reese, Cora Ruth White, Esther Marie Ward and Leona Collard.

Stop Getting Up Nights

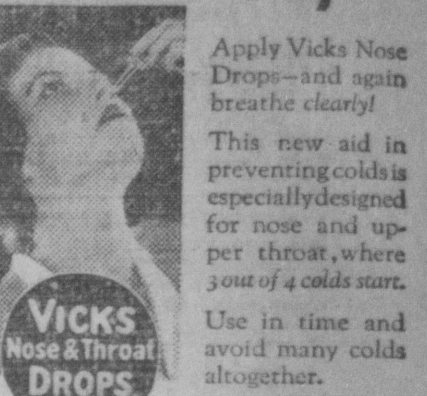

Lax the Bladder with Juniper Oil, Buchu, Etc.

Drive out the impurities and excess acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire. Juniper oil is pleasant to take in the form of BUCKETS, the bladder laxative, also containing Buchu leaves, etc. Works on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box from any drug store. After four days if not relieved of "getting up nights" go back and get your money. If you are bothered with backache or leg pains caused from bladder disorders you are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep.

Hamilton & Ryan, Drugists and Grand-Guard Drug Store say BUCKETS is a best seller.

"Fickle Multitude" The word "multitude" is a contraction of the Latin "mobile vulgus" meaning "fickle multitude." It came into use in England as a slang term some time between the reign of Charles II and the overthrow of James II.

Peace in the Far East

THE suggestion of General Araki, Japanese minister of war, that Japan summon a far eastern peace conference in Tokyo before 1935 has a pleasing sound but, needs to be looked at from several standpoints before passing judgment on its value.

There is no doubt that the Far East is a danger spot in world relations. Most of the major powers have vital interests there. This was recognized by application by General Araki in the suggestion that the conference include, in addition to Japan, the United States, Great Britain, China, India, Russia, France, Holland and Manchukuo.

Japan for the last several years has been actively pursuing a policy designed to give her a position of dominance in the Far East. Her methods have been at times ruthless and in hostile defiance of world opinion. She has gone so far as to violate treaties to which she had subscribed. The fact that the rest of the world has been too busy with big problems nearer home to give much attention to matters farther away may explain the ease with which she has carried forward her general purpose.

Even Tokyo must realize, though, that an accounting time eventually must come. The military and naval expansion plans upon which Japan is actively engaged lend force to this belief. Significant in this connection are the words of General Araki that if Japan failed to follow "the armament replenishment program and the second naval supplementary plan, the red figures in the budget will become black, but the prospect of establishing far eastern peace on an enduring basis will be lost, and the people of Asia, led by China, will become permanent servants of the white race."

In other words, she regards herself as custodian of the fate of the people of Asia, and sees the white race as a menace of these.

What would be the purpose of the suggested peace conference? In general, it would be "stabilization" of conditions in the Far East. But Japan's ideal of what would constitute stabilization might not agree with that of other powers. A hint of this was given in General Araki's assertion that the Kellogg and the Nine-Power treaties had proved defective and were in need of revision.

These are the treaties Japan is charged with violating in the course she has followed in China. The general apparently would have the pacts revised in a way that would legalize and give world approval to these violations.

The United States is eager to further peace in any part of the world, where it can do so without compromising its legitimate interests. Its participation in such a conference, that suggested by General Araki might be advisable, but it would be fully justified in being alert to the danger of being drawn into a trap.

Who says the West has lost all its wolfiness? Alkhart, Kan., citizens are asking the war department to establish a fort there for protection against the depredations of outlaws.

New Job for Uncle Sam

TOO many strange things in government have occurred recently to make almost any proposed departure from accepted principles seem unlikely.

Among the most recent suggestions is that the public schools of the nation be financed with federal funds. It was made by Dr. William Trufant Foster, of Newton, Mass., director of the Polak Foundation for Economic Research, in an address before the Central Ohio Teachers' association.

While definite in his prediction that a demand for this would be made by the people, he was indefinite as to when this would occur, but "some day," he was quoted as saying, it would come. "All over the country," he said, "the schools are being scuttled. Finched taxpayers are crying loudly for economy, and harassed officials are striking out blindly, in any direction, to save money. The schools are the easiest place to start the scuttling."

This pressing need for economy, he apparently thinks, will force the people to turn over the job of financing the schools to the federal government. How this would provide tax relief, he doesn't explain. Whether supported by the federal or state government, the money will have to come from taxes.

SYNOPSIS

The old home town—tiny Athens in the midst—is awaiting the return of its most celebrated son, "Big Jeff" Randolph, for two seasons a national football sensation at famous Thorndyke, one of the most historic of eastern universities. Thorndyke influences had lured Randolph east because he had been a high school grid marvel. On vacations, some of which he spent at home, Tommy (as he was known to his Mom and Pop and other admiring Athenians) was "the glass of fashion and the mould of form" and . . . an airy arbiter of household manners. Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the town's richest citizen, had been Tommy's high school girl friend but a rift had slowly come between them until the dazzling Thorndyke hero had become enamoured of Elaine Winthrop, artist and millionaire's daughter. Two days before Christmas, Tommy notifies Mom that he will be unable to come home as he is to be the guest of Park Avenue friends; Athens abandons its banquet plans, and it was a somewhat sad holiday in the Randolph home with no other word from "my boy." . . . Next day Mom hears neighbors at the butcher's boasting of their generous children; she shows them a handsome beaded bag saying Tommy had sent it to her. Later she receives a fancy silk shawl from him . . . she means to keep it and wear it to his graduation.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

It was three or four days before Mom got things straightened up and back in their places again. The other neighbor ladies were busy at the same thing, Mom guessed, as they didn't take much time for a talk when any of them happened to meet. And the men-folks were always apt to be short-tempered after a big time like that, what with their sleep upset and none of them young as they used to be.

"Yes," Mrs. Johnson said, "only try and get them to admit it. When my Albert gets a haircut and shave he still thinks he's a sheik."

"As long as they don't try to act it, why it ain't so bad," Mrs. Flannigan added, "but I could murder my Pat when he takes one of his notions to run his beard on my face—why it's tough as a currysom." "It's the same way with my mister," said Mrs. Farrell, "but you just got to humor 'em when they get frisky. I don't see you carrying your beaded bag, Mis' Randolph?"

The others moved over a little closer while pretending not to notice. Mom said, as though she had hardly paid any attention:

"No, I put it away for Tommy's graduation. I'll have to look swell when I go over there, you know."

"I should say you will," Mrs. Flannigan said, "among all them money'd people."

"Well, when my Joie graduates," said Mrs. Farrell, "I ain't goin' to make no fuss or feathers about it. I'll just go with what I got."

"Yes," said Mrs. Johnson, "but you're different from Mis' Randolph—your Joie don't play football."

"Huh," said Mrs. Farrell "what good's that football goin' to do him when he gets out—anyhow, Mis' Randolph, I'd think that with two bags just the same you might use one every day."

Mom said: "What do you mean, two bags the same?"

"Why, you showed us the one Tommy sent from New York—and then I heard Pete bought you one, too."

Mom hesitated, while the others could hardly hold in. Then Mom said: "Who said Pete bought one?"

"Why, I just heard it around; didn't you tell me, Mis' Flannigan?"

Mom said: "What do you mean, two bags the same?"

gan?" Mrs. Flannigan was flustered but gave Mrs. Farrell a dirty look while she tried to get out of it. "No, I didn't say exactly, or any thing like that."

Mom let her squirm for a minute, then she said: "Well, Mis' Flannigan, of course I ain't going to say anything, but I just imagine Julius would be pretty mad if he heard Myrtle was carrying store business outside."

"Myrtle never said anything," Mrs. Flannigan claimed quickly.

"I ain't saying she did," Mom said, "but if it gets around that you're telling things from out the store, that's bound to go right back at Myrtle—you ought to be careful, Mis' Flannigan."

"Anyhow," Mrs. Farrell asked, the corners of her crooked mouth pulling up until she looked like a dog snarling, "how about the two bags?"

"Well," Mom answered slowly, "not that it's anybody's business but just so nobody don't lose any more sleep about it"—she was looking at Mrs. Johnson and Butcher Brown while she said it—"there is only one bag and Pete bought it from Myrtle at Julius's."

Mrs. Farrell looked at the other two with her sickly smile. They didn't know what to do because Mom was smiling, too.

"But," Mom said, "that was only the first present from Jeff."

"My lands," Mrs. Johnson gasped, while the other two looked at each other funny, "did he send you another one?"

"Yes, I guess he was afraid his first one—the real one—might get held up in the mail so he told Pete to get me one so I'd be sure to have one for Christmas. Then, just after I left here the other day, I found it at home."

Mrs. Johnson smiled at Mom, not looking at the other two, as if she had nothing to do with them. "But Mis' Randolph—why didn't you say something?"

Mom began looking under the glass at the meat. "Oh," she said, "I'm not one of them that likes to brag about what my children do for me. Cut me a nice piece of loin steak, Butcher—the best you've got." She began humming.

"Two presents," Mrs. Johnson marvelled; "not that I'm after information or anything, Mis' Randolph, but what was the other one?"

"Oh—just a fancy silk evening shawl from Fifth Avenue in New York. Just grind up that piece of the tail, Butcher."

"Wasn't that just grand of him?" Mrs. Johnson asked the other two. Mrs. Flannigan was trying to smile.

"Now," Mom went on, "I suppose somebody'll want to know what Pete got me and what Jim got me, and what Uncle Louie and Cousin Emmy got me, and what I got them."

Mrs. Flannigan was smiling apologetically: "Now, Mis' Randolph, it ain't nothing like that at all. I knew all the time Tommy would never forget his mother."

"And whose business is it even if he did?" Mom asked, still not looking at Mrs. Farrell.

The other ladies were nervous and excited and Butcher Brown began talking about his four nephews and the appetite they had, to cover it up. Then the mailman put his head in the door.

"Who's on the pan, now?" he asked.

"Go on, you're the biggest gossip in town yourself," Mrs. Flannigan said, "how about some mail?"

"One letter for Mis' Randolph," he said, "from New York."

"Must be from Tommy," Mrs. Johnson said, with sugar in her voice.

"Nope," John said, "ain't from him—some girl's handwriting and it smells too sweet for Tommy. Here, smell it—pretty nice, huh?"

"Some of his rich friends, I bet," Mrs. Flannigan said.

Mom took the letter carefully. It was a large, gray envelope and it did smell sweet, like the garden she had always wanted. She put it in her apron pocket and gathered the folds of her shawl about her.

"This must be from the girl he was telling me about," Mom said. "A new girl, huh?" Mrs. Johnson asked.

"Oh, I wouldn't say a steady," Mom explained, because she didn't want it to get around and make Dorothy feel bad, "she's an artist and she drew his picture."

"An artist?" Mrs. Flannigan said. "Sure," Mrs. Johnson explained, "like the ones that draw the holy pictures."

"Well," said John, hitching his pack to his back, "she won't get any holy pictures from Tom."

"Go on, you," said Mrs. Johnson, "Tommy's a good boy, ain't he, Mis' Flannigan?"

"He sure is," Mrs. Flannigan replied with enthusiasm. "My lands, Mis' Randolph, what'll that young one of yours be into next?"

Mom smiled and took the letter home with her, leaving a disappointed gallery at Butcher Brown's. She was relieved, in a sense, glowing with a victory over the gossips and she left that now they couldn't say anything about the bag because none of them could get anything out of Pete; but she was nervous, too, because it had worried her, and now that it was over she left the effect of the strain. Mom was not as young as she used to be and she didn't like quarrelling; it was only when it was forced on her that she took her part—and they had been after her all the time about something ever since Tommy dared to try to make a man of himself.

Well, Tommy Randolph was her son and she would protect him. But what was in the letter?

Mom would have loved to have opened it at the store in front of all of them, just to make them madder; but she wasn't sure what was in it and she thought it best to pretend that getting a letter from one of Tommy's rich friends was nothing new or unusual. She heard quick steps from behind. Mrs. Flannigan came up.

"I'm all out of breath," she said, "trying to catch up with you. I just stayed long enough to tell that one what I thought of her."

"You shouldn't have bothered," Mom said.

"But the idea of her trying to throw the blame on me and Myrtle. Mrs. Flannigan continued, swinging her gaunt frame along, "when she made up the whole thing her own self."

"I wouldn't be surprised," she said, "she just tried to put two and two together. She saw that bag in the window and started to haintin' so I just asked Myrtle, so I could shut her up."

"And what did Myrtle say?" Mrs. Flannigan smiled. "Well, the fact is, thinkin' I was just after information, she told me to just mind my own business because she never carried stuff out of the store—and that's the spittin' truth of it, Mis' Randolph."

"Of course," Mom replied, "it really isn't anything and a body shouldn't let themselves get bothered by gossips anyhow, but I am glad to know Myrtle is all right because she's so nice to help wait on you. Of course Julius always waits on me personal but he usually tells Myrtle to go get the things."

Sinusitis Is a Dangerous Disease

Serious Complications Frequently Follow If It Is Neglected

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

MOST PERSONS are familiar with that disturbance known as "sinus disease". It is indeed a common affliction. Hardly a day passes that I do not receive an inquiry about this disorder.

Unfortunately few realize it can be prevented. It is important to prevent it, or to begin treatment as early as possible. When neglected the disease may result in serious complications.

Sinusitis, as its name implies, is an inflammation of the nasal sinuses. The sinuses are cavities in the bones of the head. They are connected with the inside of the nose by means of small passageways.

Each sinus is given a special name. The name usually corresponds to the bone in which it is located. For example, the "ethmoidal sinus" is located in the "ethmoid bone," and the "frontal sinus" is located in the "frontal bone."

Colds Often Cause It
"What causes sinusitis?" "Is it curable?" These are questions asked about this affliction.

Sinusitis can usually be traced to a head cold, to coryza, influenza or some other infectious disease. The germs of the infection reach one of the sinuses where they rapidly multiply and set up an inflammation.

The sufferer complains of severe headache, pain in the face, discharge from the nose and throat, and difficulty in breathing through the nose.

The disease soon becomes chronic, largely because the sinuses are inaccessible to simple medications and local treatment. Then again, most victims of sinusitis neglect the disorder or rely upon patent medicines and ineffective remedies. This is unfortunate because pus soon accumulates within the sinuses and leads to poisoning of the whole system.

Dangerous Complications
In many instances neglected sinusitis may give rise to dangerous complications. The pus sometimes breaks through the walls of the sinuses, eventually reaching the eye, brain or the blood stream. When this occurs, expert medical attention is essential, because continued neglect may lead to a fatal outcome.

Sinusitis and the complications of sinusitis can be prevented by immediate medical care of the common cold. If you contract a cold do not regard it lightly. Rest in bed and if you are unable to rest, consult your doctor. If sinusitis develops do not rely upon home remedies but take and follow expert advice.

In a persistent case of sinusitis it may be advisable to operate upon the infected sinus and drain off the pus. Of course, this must be determined by the physician who will be guided by the conditions.

In most instances he will advise an X-ray picture. This will determine the extent of the infection. The physician then decides whether an operation is necessary.

In children, removal of infected tonsils and adenoids is beneficial and prevents further trouble. Every effort should be made to prevent repeated attacks of sinusitis and thus escape its undesirable complications.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor, Circleville Herald.
Dear Sir:

It is the opinion of the writer—and his opinion is shared by scores of other residents of Circleville—that no adequate expression of appreciation has been given to the many excellent performances of the Circleville High School bands and their exceptionally able directors and their leaders.

The striking showings of these two musical organizations would do honor to a city much larger than ours, and the fact that these bands perform so well, and give so generously of their time and talents whenever there is need of their services, certainly should be a source of pride for all who call Circleville their home.

Why not give these young people "a great big hand" in The Herald and let them know that the good work they are doing is appreciated by the people of the city? Their efforts have been proven to be exceedingly worthwhile, and they deserve more than a few encouraging pats on the back. Cordially yours,
Fred C. Clark.

At last Mack Sennett's super-feature comedy, "Hypnotized," is ready for the screen and will be presented next Saturday as the big World Wide feature at the Grand Theater.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Edmund Lowe believes that an actor should have two careers. That's why he purchased himself a ranch in Northern California. Lowe is featured with Nancy Carroll, Robert Armstrong, and Lew Cody in "I Love That Man," a Charles R. Rogers production for Paramount, which comes to the Cliftona Theater Friday and Saturday. It was directed by Harry Joe Brown. During a lull between scenes on the lot, he explained his idea.

"Because an actor's imagination must be constantly stimulated and can best be stimulated by contrast, it is wise for him to have another career that takes him away from the dazzle and glamour that surround him as an actor," said Lowe.

Besides, Lowe explained, an actor knows that the years will dim his drawing power as a star, and it's a good idea to have something to fall back upon when audiences turn fickle.

astrous season in which the Tigers have failed to win a single game. It begins at 3 p. m. on the high school field with McMath and Ross both of Columbus, officiating.

A pep rally was to be held this afternoon at the high school with the entire student body taking part. The band is expected to parade the uptown district immediately before the game.

The team has had several good workouts this week and Coach Herberholz is highly hopeful of knocking off Jerry Kingmore's team. The Marysville outfit is one team that the Tigers have been successful against in the last few years, so it is hoped it can be put on the Tiger side of the ledger.

Gaines Hill, playing his final game in a Tiger uniform, will captain the team on the field.

The Red and Black players have been working on blocking and tackling this week and in Wednesday's drill were showing much proficiency.

Coach Herberholz is not certain about his starting lineup.

SPORT BRIEFS

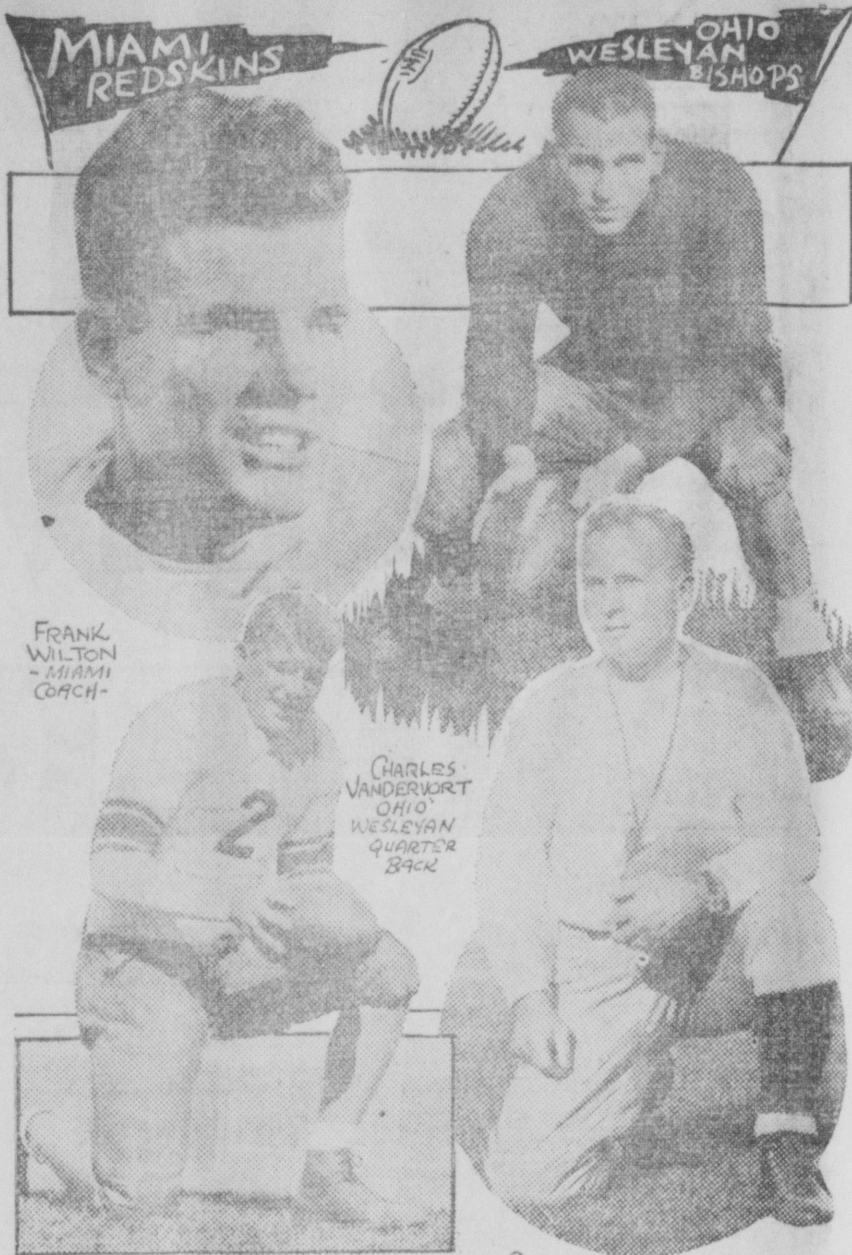

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 7.—Princeton experimented with changes in the line today in preparation for Dartmouth. Weller and Bliss replaced Kopfe and John at the guards. The Tiger is showing proficiency in stopping Dartmouth plays.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 9.—Yale was elated today over the attacking power shown by the varsity yesterday in scoring three times against the freshmen. An increasing toll of injuries makes the line-up uncertain for the Georgia game. Whitehead will be unable to play because of an infected foot; Nichols has developed a charley horse and De Angelis has a lame shoulder.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 9.—Harvard coaches today tried to strengthen the defense of the Crimson against the Warner attack as staged by the Army. Nearly 50,000 have already bought tickets to see the Harvard play the cadets.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 9.—The Army squad, 38 strong, leaves here this afternoon for Cambridge. The cadet corps will leave here Friday night. Four special trains will carry the 1,300 cadets and the military academy band.

CHARLES VANDERVOORT—OHIO WESLEYAN QUARTERBACK

GEORGE GAUTHIER—OHIO WESLEYAN COACH

Football strategy will be matched by the four men shown here with next Saturday at Delaware when Ohio Wesleyan and Miami tangle in a Buckeye conference battle that will eliminate one or the other from further consideration in the race for the championship.

Frank Wilton, Jr., Miami mentor and youngest coach in the Buckeye will pit his gridiron knowledge against that of George Gauthier, veteran Ohio Wesleyan coach.

While the tutors guide their teams from the sidelines, strategy on the field will be in the hands of Chuck Vandervoort, Portsmouth, Ohio Wesleyan quarterback, and Pat Roubesh, Oxford, Miami quarterback. Incidentally, these two boys will captain their respective teams Saturday.

chance of winning the World's gridiron championship. Just how big that chance is will be better known next Sunday afternoon, when the Portsmouth "iron-men" engage their bitter rivals, Green Bay Packers, at Universal Stadium. The kick-off will take place at 2:30 p. m.

After last Sunday's battle with New York, Coach Clark, Portsmouth's diminutive mentor, had little hope for a Spartan victory over the Packers next Sunday afternoon all because three star backs were placed on the injured list.

Cripples ready. But Mister Clark has now allowed a faint smile to break his prevailing pessimism for all his crippled boys are back in uniform. That means the Spartans trek to the flood-wall stadium full strength, determined to trim the Packers and gain revenge for the 17 to 0 defeat given them earlier in the season at Green Bay.

Such a feat will tax the Spartans to the limit. Green Bay's stock has boomed considerably since early schedule defeats, having claimed a strong Cardinal eleven their latest victim, defeating them at Chicago last Sunday, 14-6.

Portsmouth gridders have been drilled during the past week in the art of breaking up forward passes. Green Bay's chief mode of attack. The Packers have two expert passers in Herber and Engleman, alternating halfbacks, and a pair of fine receivers in Johnny Blood and Lavvue Dilweg, the former a back and the latter an end.

That Coach Curley Lambeau will turn these men loose instead of trying to pound along on the ground through the strong Spartan forward wall is almost a foregone conclusion.

KURTH TO START. Green Bay's probable starting line-up will be Dilweg and Rose, ends; Hubbard and Kurth, tackles; Michalske and Evans, guards; Bullman, center; Blood and Herber, halfbacks; and Hinkle, full-back, with Grove calling signals at quarterback.

Recreation Accidents. Accidents on the baseball field, mostly on the amateur field, are more numerous than any other kind of recreation accidents, even more than swimming and bathing.

Art Lane, Princeton football captain, should know how to handle an eleven for he is the eldest of eleven children of John J. Lane of Arlington, Mass. The Tiger leader is 22 and plays at tackle. He broke his collarbone in the Columbia game last year and was out for much of the season.

RUBBER DOLLARS

HOW OFTEN have you and friend wife wondered how "the Joneses" seemed to do so much on their income? From remarks dropped by Jones, you're almost certain you earn as much as he. You're dead certain you and your wife are not extravagant or wasteful. Yet the Joneses do little things you can't afford — and have little things for which you can't spare the money. How come?

The truth is that Joneses have a secret. They have discovered a way of putting rubber into dollars. Through the knowledge of this secret they have learned that a dollar can be stretched beyond its ordinary buying limits

What is the secret? They read the advertisements!

In the advertisements in this newspaper, reliable merchants and manufacturers offer you their finest values. Before going to the store to buy, shop here first. Compare products until you've found just what you want. Compare prices until you've pleased your purse. You'll save endless hours of weary walking. And you'll buy with the comforting assurance that every dollar has done its duty!

Nazi Mass Marriage Copied by Il Duce

MASS MARRIAGE OF STORM TROOPERS
PREMIER AND MRS. MUSSOLINI
POPE PIUS XI

The wedding festival, or "consecration of nuptiality," in Italy recently, a feature of which was the mass marriage of more than 2,500 couples, was such a success that Premier Benito Mussolini, at whose behest it was held, may make it an annual affair. The mass marriage idea for the purpose of raising the birthrate has been a favorite theme with dictators. Napoleon tried it, and more recently, Chancellor Hitler of Germany blessed a large number of his storm troopers who took brides en masse. In Rome the happy couples received presents—amounting to $40 each—from the State, and also received the Papal blessing from Pope Pius at a Vatican reception.

Soviet Envoy?
Though the U. S. has not formally recognized Russia as yet, it is reported on reliable authority that M. Sokolnikoff, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, has been chosen as the first Soviet Ambassador to the United States following recognition. He is a former Soviet Ambassador to England and was delegate to the Hague.

Convicted Widow of Bandit
Keeping remarkably calm despite her unenviable predicament, Burnah White, 19-year-old bride of Thomas White, is pictured with her mother, Mrs. Joseph Adams, in Los Angeles court, as she heard the jury find her guilty on eleven counts of robbery and shooting. She drove the automobile in which her husband terrorized the district until he was slain by police.

Peppers with Devil's Cheese
Stuffing
1 C. rice
2 medium sized green peppers
1 tin deviled ham
(3 1/2 oz.)
3 C. milk
1/2 lb. American cheese
2 Tbsp. butter or margarine
5 Tbsp. flour
1/4 tsp. celery salt
Cook the rice in salted boiling water until tender. Remove stems and seeds from peppers, split lengthwise and parboil for 5 minutes. Add the deviled ham and one cup of the grated cheese to the milk, butter and flour, and add one cup of this to the rice mixture. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt.

Fill the halves of the peppers and sprinkle with crumbs or grated cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes. Add the rest of the cheese to the white sauce, stir until the cheese is melted. Season well and serve with the peppers. This recipe makes 8 servings.

A pullet in British Columbia has been honored for laying 357 eggs in 365 days. In the United States under the new deal, she's ostracized.

Leading Women's Organizations Put Strength Behind Recovery Campaign

There is every indication that the great masses of the women of the United States are standing loyally behind the Government's drive to end unemployment and the depression, Mrs. Mary G. Morris, member of the local NRA committee, said today.

"Reports and messages reaching local NRA headquarters from Washington," said Mrs. Morris "indicate that women's organizations all over the country are officially going on record with whole-hearted endorsement of the special efforts being sponsored by Uncle Sam to find jobs for the unemployed and end the distress brought about by the business slump. Recently Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, with a membership of 2,000,000 returned to her home in Washington after a four weeks speaking campaign on behalf of the Recovery program. She traveled over a number of states in the West and South-west. Everywhere she found women more optimistic and more willing to patiently await eventual good from the NRA. She stated that women in Wyoming, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, New Mexico, Nebraska, Colorado and Texas are taking an active, intelligent interest, and are loyally patronizing the shops and industries lined up with NRA."

"And in the same spirit the Idaho State Federation of Women's Clubs at its recent convention adopted a resolution approving the National Recovery Act. The Michigan State Council of the United States Daughters of 1812 at their recent convention in Detroit unanimously pledged its influence for support of the National Recovery Act. The Rochester Diocesan Council of the National Council of Catholic Women in a convention assembled at Rochester passed resolutions expressing their satisfaction at the achievements which the NRA has already effected, especially in the re-employment of over 3,000,000 wage earners and the outlawing of child labor. The Council pledged its fullest support and cooperation to the Government to the end that social injustice be abolished throughout the land. And the Missouri Daughters of the American Revolution were among the many other women's organizations to go on record officially as working under the banner of the Blue Eagle. Also a number of the Chapters of the Women of the Moose of California have gone on record recently in endorsing the NRA."

Administration Asks Giant Banks to Accept Unneeded R.F.C. Loans

WASHINGTON — The Roosevelt Administration is secretly putting pressure on the largest banks in the country to accept unwanted and unneeded loans from the R. F. C.

Among those being solicited are the Mellon banks in Pittsburgh, the Chase, National City and Guaranty Trust, of New York City, and the Bank of Italy, of California.

There is a reason for this policy:

The Deposit Insurance Act becomes effective January 1. The Treasury is now examining all banks, member as well as non-member. Many banks, while solvent, are not up to par in liquidity.

To enable them to meet requirements, the government proposes to make them loans in the form of purchases of preferred stock. The R. F. C. believes only $150,000,000 will be necessary for this purpose, but is prepared to spend a billion.

This is a legitimate measure. It means safeguarding billions of dollars of depositors' money. But a question of public policy enters.

The R. F. C. has to make a monthly report to Congress on its loans to banks. These reports are made public. Where a bank is shown to have received government money, doubts and suspicions are immediately raised against it, in some cases by its competitors.

To remove all stigma from R. F. C. loans, the Administration proposes to have a number of the giant banks, about whose stability there is no doubt, take government money.

Hull Has a Word for It

Lobbyists now swamping the Capitol more than at any other time in history have worked out different categories for the New Dealers. They are classified under "Friendly" or "Hostile."

The friendliest New Dealer is Cordell Hull, administrator of Public Works under Secretary Ickes. Waiter's office swarms with lobbyists, all wanting a nibble at the fund. He patiently sees them all, calls them his friends, will not even reveal their names.

Just the opposite is Waiter's chief, hard-hitting Harold Ickes. His office also teems with lobbyists, but he dislikes them, shows it in his conversation.

But the man who hates them most is Cordell Hull, the angular Secretary of State. Sec. Hull has a name for lobbyists which cannot be printed here. It's the solid, Biblical name for bad women. The expletive, coming from the usually reserved Secretary of State, is expressive and to the point.

Far-Reaching Step

There is a great deal more to public works emergency Housing Corporation than appears on the surface.

In the housing construction field it has practically unlimited powers. Not only can it build or remodel housing accommodations, but the corporation has absolute authority to fix the basis on which they may be let. For example, there is nothing in the law to prevent the government from making such quarters available to the unemployed free of rent.

Rebuff

General W. W. Atterbury, head of the Pennsylvania Railroad and staunch friend of Herbert Hoover, had his $150,000 salary slashed to $60,000 at government behest. Now he is doing a little nose-thumping at the Roosevelt Administration.

CUBAN TROOPS ATTACK FORTRESS HELD BY REBELS; FIGHTING HEAVY

Martin Declares War
in Effort to End
Strife

LINER IS BARRED

'Fight to Finish' Expected Today

HAVANA, Nov. 9.—In a decisive effort to bring an end to Cuba's latest revolutionary uprising, forces loyal to President Ramon Grau San Martin today opened a bombardment of Atares fortress, rebel headquarters.

Small field guns were brought into action as troops sought to dislodge the insurrectionists, who announced they would stand their ground until the last man was killed.

Two civilians were killed and five wounded in the exchange of firing. They were struck by bullets while congregated near the plant of the Cuban Electric company, whose boiler room was hit by a shell, injuring a workman.

LINER BARRED

The Munson liner Munargo which arrived today was not permitted to dock because of the firing. Employees of the Pan-American Airways evacuated their offices in the harbor.

Mobilized by declaration of a "state of war," which invoked martial law, federal cavalry and infantry took up posts opposite the fortress and cleared the nearby waterfront of all residents and pedestrians.

Fears were felt the battle would add heavily to the list of casualties, set by the government as 22 dead and 75 wounded.

It was feared shells may cripple Havana's light service. The electric plant is almost in the direct line of fire between the federal emplacements and the rebel stronghold, an ancient thick-walled fortress built 150 years ago.

The insurrectionists evacuated previous headquarters and concentrated in the fortress, built high on the top of a rocky hill overlooking the harbor, when the federal launched a mopping up of army camps and barracks captured by the rebels at the outbreak of the revolt.

FOR DE CESPEDES

Leaders of the uprising are attempting to unseat Grau San Martin and restore to power former provisional President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, who was appointed immediately after the downfall of Gerardo Machado.

KENTUCKY IN WET PARADE

Margin is About 3-2; Utah Becomes 36th State To Oust Prohibition.

By International News Service

Of the last six states which have been balloted on the question of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, four voted overwhelmingly for repeal and two against repeal.

For repeal, Utah, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kentucky.

Against: North Carolina, and South Carolina.

Latest figures:

Utah — for repeal 101,103, against 63,248.

Ohio — for 1,433,157, against 578,947.

Pennsylvania — For 1,470,987, against 469,133.

Kentucky — 940 precincts out of 4,204; for repeal 79,127, against 56,423.

North Carolina—1,488 precincts out of 1,831; for 109,660, against 259,000.

South Carolina—1,028 precincts out of 1,220; for 33,220, against 36,570.

Regardless of the action of the two southern states—first of the states to start a dry column—Prohibition is dead. Utah became the 36th state to vote for repeal, thus providing the necessary two-thirds majority. The effective date of repeal of the eighteenth amendment is December 5.

Son Succeeds Slain Afghan

KABUL, Afghanistan, Nov. 9.—Mourning the assassination of King Nadir Khan, stable boy who became the world's most absolute despot, Afghanistan turned its allegiance today to the slain ruler's 17-year-old son.

The son was proclaimed monarch immediately after his father's death at "the hands of a traitor," and was enthroned as King Zahir Shah. The government reported the country orderly.

Nadir Khan was proclaimed King in October, 1929 after fighting his way to the throne. He had been minister to France from 1921 to 1928, and before that a soldier of fortune.

2 TRIALS BOOKED

Clerk of Courts A. L. Wilder, Thursday, was sending notices to petit jurors to report for duty Monday when trial of the suit of Etta Davis, Columbus, against J. H. Wright, of Kingston, for damages as the result of an auto wreck, is scheduled to begin.

Another suit in connection with the same wreck is scheduled before Judge J. W. Adkins two days later. It is the suit of Sheldon Steele, Columbus, against Mr. Wright.

Hamilton and Kramer, Columbus, and E. L. Crist are attorneys for the plaintiffs and Ballard and Hensel represent Wright.

STRIKERS DESTROY THIRD RAIL BRIDGE

FORTSMOUTH, Ind., Nov. 9.—Strikers destroyed the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad bridge one mile south of here early today in what authorities said was another effort by farm strike pickets to prevent farm-to-market shipments.

The fire burned away most of the bridge superstructure before sheriff's deputies and railroad hands arrived on the scene.

It was the third railroad bridge destroyed in the state this week in the farm strike.

Sheriff George E. Jensen said the fire undoubtedly was set by farm strike pickets. The sheriff said he would file a complete report with Gov. Clyde Herring.

JEFFRIES LOSES

Lawrence T. Jeffries, son of Mrs. T. F. Jeffries, was defeated for Lancaster, where he is a practicing attorney, by Esther H. Brocker, Republican incumbent. The vote was 3,176 against 2,376.

MANY NEW FACES TO APPEAR NEXT YEAR IN CITY OFFICIAL FAMILY

Cady Silent on Appointees; New Mayor to
Also Head Show

GOELLER HAS JOB

Important Chairmanships
Vacant on January 1

Circleville voters, Thursday, had sufficiently recovered from the Tuesday election to realize that a drastic change will be seen in the city's government when newly-elected officials assume office next January 1.

They elected a new mayor, four new councilmen out of seven, a new solicitor and one of five members of the board of education.

The new mayor will be William B. Cady who returns Democratic rule to the city after six years. His first duties, of course, will be appointment of successors to J. Wallace Crist and A. J. Lyle as safety and service directors. Mr. Crist became safety director when Mr. Hedges began his last term.

The safety director succeeded Mack Parrett, Jr., who served after the late Cassius Clay resigned. Mr. Lyle was named service director when L. E. Miller resigned.

CADY KEEPS 'MUM'

Mr. Cady has not even 'inked' who his appointees will be and he plans to withhold any information until shortly before he enters office. The new mayor will also hold one of the city's most important jobs, president of the Pumpkin Show society.

The new council will be John C. Goeller, president; C. O. Leist, first ward; Julius Helwagen, second ward; Dan T. Ryan, third ward; William M. Reid, fourth ward; Ben H. Gordon, W. F. Baker and F. A. Marion, councilmen-at-large. The former three were re-elected. Clark Will was defeated Tuesday in the third ward vote and Tull M. Barnes was defeated in the primary by Mr. Reid for the Democratic nomination. E. S. Neuding did not run for re-election as councilman-at-large and Mack Parrett, Jr., although he led the Republican councilmen, was not re-elected. Other Republican candidates for councilman-at-large were R. L. Brehrer and Hildeburn Jones.

LEAGUE IS JUBILANT

The Circleville Citizens' league claims a victory for municipal ownership of utilities in the election. The league opposed Mr. Will, Mr. Brehrer and Mr. Jones. All councilmen who have been elected are favorable to municipal ownership if an effort to obtain lower rates from utilities is ineffective.

Carl C. Leist, son of C. A. Leist, Democratic chairman, will succeed Paul E. Adkins as solicitor. Adkins did not seek re-election and Leist had no opposition in either primary or general election. Adkins is completing his third term.

The new board of education will be comprised of Mrs. Lillian W. Moore, Lawrence Goeller, Charles H. May, Robert G. Colville and C. R. Barnhart. The only new member is Mrs. Moore, who ran well to oust Joseph R. Noecker from the board, where he had served for a number of years. Mr. Goeller was re-elected while the other three terms will not expire for two years.

All told it was a 'hot' election and the changes will be carefully watched by residents of the city.

NEEDS CHAIRMAN

John C. Goeller, re-elected president of council without opposition, faces a task with the new council. Several important committees will be left rudderless with the withdrawal of E. S. Neuding, chairman of the important finance and appropriation committee and has been for a number of years. Besides that he is chairman of Berger hospital committee. Mr. Will is his right-hand man on the finance committee, thus leaving two vacancies to be filled. Mr. Will, besides his work on the finance committee, is also chairman of the railroads, telephones and franchises committee. Mr. Barnes is head of the important safety committee and Parrett heads the committee on ordinances and libraries.

BANKS TO CLOSE

All Circleville Banks will be closed Saturday in observance of Armistice Day, a national holiday.

SENTENCE GRABILL TO STATE'S PRISON

Fayette-Co Judge Revokes
Parole; Saves Pickaway-
Co Trial Expense.

Judge H. M. Rankin, of Fayette-county common pleas court, saved the local courts some expense and time, Wednesday, when he sentenced Clark Grabill, well known Five Points stock dealer, to one to three years in the Ohio penitentiary for violation of parole.

Grabill was indicted here Monday for petit larceny in the theft of two sheep. Had he pleaded guilty or been convicted of this charge a parole on which he had been placed on a forgery charge would have been revoked.

Judge Rankin sentenced Grabill for parole violation.

He was originally tried in Washington C. H. for giving a series of bad checks and was found guilty. When he agreed to make the checks good he was placed on probation.

Recent reports of his activities along the check line reached the court and Grabill was brought into court, given a hearing and sentenced.

He was to be taken to the Ohio prison, Thursday.

ASHVILLE EATING PLACE IS ROBBED

The restaurant and pool room of Lewis Wilkins, Asheville, was broken into and cigarettes and other articles were stolen, the sheriff's office was informed Thursday morning.

OM MOONEY AGAIN SEEKS HIGH COURT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Based upon new legal grounds, an appeal will be made to the supreme court within a month to free Tom Mooney, noted labor leader, from San Quentin prison, Cal., it was announced today.

The second appeal to the high court will be made possible through developments which accompanied the trial last year of Mooney upon an old indictment for complicity in the tragic San Francisco "Progress" parade bombing 17 years ago.

It is that conviction of a person on perjured testimony is a denial of due process of law as guaranteed by the federal constitution. The new step in the long effort to free Mooney, whose case has attracted world-wide attention has been investigated by agencies of two presidents, is being formulated by John F. Finerty of this city and Frank Walsh of New York as counsel for the Mooney defense committee.

After Mooney was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment successive appeals were made, the last to the supreme court, but a writ of review was denied.

When Mooney was brought to trial on a separate, old indictment for the death of one person in the Preparedness parade last year, it was contended that Mooney was brought to his fate through perjured testimony.

WALNUT-TWP SCHOOL NEWS

Walnut News is on the way. Things that happen every day. Themes, honor and attendance, too. What they do we write for you.

The lower hall is more attractive, since the class pictures have been removed from the office and hung there.

Jennie Horton, '32, visited the high school, Wednesday, Nov. 1. Misses Freda Allen and Beatrice Lynn and Mrs. Alice H. visited the school Friday, Nov. 3.

No wonder the orchestra and Glee Club members couldn't keep in tune with the instrument that gave them their pitch. The piano in the music room was tuned by George Peters of Ashville, Thursday.

The classrooms of the school have been labeled in order to enable the visitors next week to find their way about the building. As an afterthought we believe this will also be a great help to the poor Freshmen who are continually getting lost and being led to their classes.

Girls' basketball allsquad will miss very much this year. Dorothy Updyke, who graduated, also Betty DeLong and Frances Hartman, who are finishing their schooling at Columbus, North.

We have a number of Freshmen girls participating this year also Ruth Dunkel, a former student of Circleville.

The boys held their first athletic meeting Wednesday. The new officers were elected for the year. They are as follows:

Wayne Brown, president; George Scholer, vice-president; Link Brown, secretary and treasurer.

An old bill was brought up before the organization by Mr. Sponsler and was decided that it would be cleared up.

The fee for the membership was set the same as last year. This effects only those coming into the association. All the standing members have their dues to pay to hold their membership.

Walnut is organizing into class basketball teams. This plan was decided upon so more boys and girls will get to play basketball. This will help to break the monopoly for those who hoped to make the team but didn't.

Non-Stop Globe Dash

A non-stop flight around the world in three and a half days is the ambitious program planned by Captain Bennett Griffin, noted American flier. He said he will use a plane "of unusual design" and is promised the cooperation of the U. S. Army and Navy. He'll make the attempt next May.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

The Parable of the Snail

By IRVIN S. COBB

TWO members of a colored labor battalion in France were languidly filling a shell hole behind the lines of the A. E. F. Along came an officer who spoke to them in harsh words. When he had passed on, one of the pair, relapsing from temporary activity back again into his regular dreamy state, remarked:

"Suttinly in a mouty free cursin' wite man, dat young lieutenant. Suttinly does know how to use strong language w'en he craves for somebody to show him some speed. Puts me in mind of a parable."

"What's a parable?" inquired his companion, sitting down on the edge of the excavation in order to give his entire attention to listening. "I'm goin' to tell you, buddy. Dis yere parable is 'bout a snail. Now dis yere snail belonged to our family. We kep' him fur a pet 'round de house. After wile he got so he could un'erstand ev'rythin' you said to him 'an could tawk back, jes' same ez a Christian. I reckon dey never wuz no likelier snail 'en what dis snail wuz."

"Well, one mawnin' Pappy wuz taken down with a powerful mizry in his insides. He's feared he's gwine die, den an' dere. He tell Mammy send fur de doctor right away. Mammy run to de do' to call one of us chillun but we is all off skylarkin' somewhars an' 'tain't nobody in sight but de fambly snail, which is settin' on de do' step, sunnin' himself. So she say to him, she say:

"Run quick fur de doctor, right away! Pappy's got de cramps an' seems lak, ef we don't get help soon he gwine cramp himself into a hard knot!"

"All right," de snail say, "all right. I'll go. You go back inside de house an' wait after po' Pappy 'til I go fur de doctor."

"So Mammy she went back an' start in rubbin' Pappy's stomach. One hour pass, two hours pass an' Pappy don't get no better an' they ain't hair nur hide of no doctor comin'."

"Pappy he keep on moanin' an' groanin' an' carryin' on. Mammy she keep on rubbin'. She ain't stop to cook no vittles fur dinner; jes' keep on rubbin'."

"Twelve o'clock come an' still no sign of de doctor, an' Pappy gittin' wuss off all de time. Then, purty soon it's going on one o'clock. After awhile mo' it's gettin' to be goin' on fo' o'clock. Jes' befo' dark Pappy he sez natchelly can't stand dis no longer. Run out in de yard an' see ef de doctor ain't coming yet."

"So Mammy go to de do' and lo an' behole, dere is dat snail moseyin' along de walk an' not mo'n half way to de front gate. He been all dat time gettin' dat fur."

"Mammy she's plum outdone. She yell out at him: 'W'y you lazy, wuthless, no 'count snail, ain't I tell you early dis mawnin' dat po' Pappy mouty nigh daid, an' ain't I ast you go fur de doctor, an' ain't you promise me you'd start fo' th'with, an' now, doggone you yere you is, not traveled mo'n twenty feet! What kind of a way is dat to ack?'"

"De snail turn 'round an' rear back an' look Mammy in de eye an' he say to her: 'Lissen yere, woman, you tawk to me day way, I won't go a' tall!'"

There will also be an inter-class tournament to be played in the spring some time after the inner school tournament.

Each class is to have a team with the players picked from their respective classes.

The referees for these games will be chosen from members of the faculty.

This plan has been sanctioned by the board of education.

The schedule and managers will be announced later.

The varsity squad is anxious for practice to begin.

Their schedule will be made out November 11.

Who doesn't enjoy speeches? Especially when they are not long and dry. This is the treat the American Literature class had Friday, Nov. 3. Each member gave a subject and some other class member gave his idea of a good answer. There was every subject that ranged from "My First Date With a Girl" to "My Experience in Alaska."

Gladys Hickman and Elizabeth Reber participated in the radio audition held at the Cliftona Theatre, Wednesday night, Nov. 1.

The orchestra played at the chicken supper Friday, Nov. 3. Other selections were: The Guitar Trio, composed of Cecil Gray, Merl Kinser and Howard Waits, who played several numbers.

Ethel May and George Peters played piano solos and Hugh Huffer played a trumpet solo.

At Walnut, November 9, don't forget they are giving a nifty radiolette.

The Economics class is just completing a study of money, its value and physical characteristics, its denominations and the various economic laws concerning money. A close watch is being kept upon the activities of the federal government in its gold-buying program, and its effect upon commodity prices, as well as the reaction of European countries upon our monetary policy.

France especially, since she is the only important because she still clings to gold as a monetary standard. The Economics class will next take up Credit and Banking.

The law class is fairly launched on a study of negotiable instruments, which include notes, drafts, bills of exchange, trade acceptances and checks. Who is a holder in due course? What are his rights? What are his liabilities? What must a negotiable instrument contain? What must it not contain? These are a few of the many important questions under consideration.

The science class is studying photo synthesis, the process by which green plants manufacture their own food from air, water and sunlight.

The English class is studying Treasure Island, that story by Robert Louis Stevenson which critics chose to be the best boys' story ever written. In addition, the agreement of verbs with their subjects will also be studied.

Work is progressing on "Radiolette," the musical comedy skit being presented by the Walnut Glee Club under the direction of Miss Huffner, assisted by Mr. Dumm.

Freshmen and Sophomores classes have been spending the past two weeks studying project account. Project accounting teaches the boys how to make the proper entries and keep an accurate record of all activities taking place during the course of project. Records are not with value unless they are summarized and then antilized, after the project is antilized the boys have available figures that tell them what their labor income is, returns per dollars worth of feed, feed cost per 100 pounds of live weight produced, total cost per 100 pounds produced and labor income which is the main item of interest to all boys.

Home Economics—One has been studying milk and its importance in the diet, composition and rules for the care of milk in the home, breakfast cereals and breads. The class is also making quick breads.

The second year Home Economics class is working on the construction of their cotton and wool dresses. Fitting is being stressed. Each girl is held responsible for the fit of her partners.

Boys' days absence, 14 days or 96 per cent attendance. Girls, 13 days absence or 97 per cent attendance. This has been the best week of the year for attendance.

Ralph and Koyat McNeal have withdrawn and are going to enter at Ashville.

A spelling contest is being held in the eighth grade. The room is divided into nine, five-pupil teams. Since there are 47 in the grade this leaves us two extra for substitutes. The groups are chosen by lot. The winning group this week was composed of, Robert Balthaser, June Armstrong, Jean Harber, Belva Merritt, Jay Hay.

Some practical work in arithmetic was done in class this week. Several wagon box dimensions were sent in to find how much corn they would hold.

In an English exercise we finished a story which was only partly given to us. Jacqueline Lewis had the best ending for the story.

We have two new pictures donated by June Armstrong, one of our eighth graders. They are: "The Song of a Lark" and "The Angelus."

We have 31 pupils who have neither been absent or tardy this year.

The seventh grade has a bulletin board on which the members post interesting articles, keeping alert on new inventions, the highlights of history and current events. A current events note book is kept in which the weekly magazine is posted.

This week Normagene Coon has the most one hundred in spelling. Boyd Mettler and Roy Ruh have the most one hundredths in Arithmetic.

The room is taking part in the P. T. A. Friday evening, Nov. 10. Program: Miss Weaver's room is going to give a part of the program, the orchestra will play, Helen McCord will play a solo solo, and Mr. Brown will give awards.

For the past few weeks the following pupils have perfect attendance: Elsi Barr, Gertrude Barr, Ruth Bowman, Mary Clark, Donald Fisher, Doris Frazier, Vernon Garrett, Joe Hedger, Harriet Heffner, Thelma Hines, Paul Hoover, Thelma Johnson, Donald Kern,

PERRY-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

The Prince of Peace contest will be held at the church Sunday evening, Nov. 11 at eight o'clock. The orations are as follows:

The Red Juggernaut, Martha French. Mars or God, Martha Wright. There is no Peace, Margaret Turner.

Education for World Citizenship, Helen Skinner.

The fifth grade had perfect attendance last week.

An outside basket ball court has been made. It is now possible in good weather, for both boys and girls to practice at the same time.

With both outdoor and indoor practice we should be able to develop two very good teams.

The chapel program presented Tuesday morning under the direction of Miss Hauman was enjoyed very much. The program which was of an Armistice character was as follows:

Song: America, audience. Story: Glenn Conrad. Prayer: Addie Ruth Skinner. Scripture reading, John Lamb. Prince of Peace orations, Martha French, Martha Wright, Margaret Turner.

Heroes of Peace, Fern Bentley. The Hallow'een party sponsored by the Atlanta P. T. A. on Monday evening, Oct. 12 was a complete success.

The winners of the various contest were as follows: Martha French dressed as a pirate was given the prize for the prettiest costume. Sara Oglesbee and Hazel Chilcote as death angels had the most original costumes. Elzie Radcliff won first and Elbert Dennis won second prize in the old fiddlers contest. The fortune teller was kept very busy and the fish pond was well patronized. The lunch stand did a good business. The auditorium, decorated with fodder and pumpkin faces lighted with candles presented a very spooky appearance.

The orchestra is progressing very well with the new books which were recently purchased. A class in instrumental music has been organized by Frank Hickman of Lancaster. Sever took lessons last week. Several others are expected to start taking soon.

Spelling honor roll: Second grade—Mary Stevenson. Third grade—Ruby Bentley, Hazel Hatfield and Mary Jane Downing.

Fourth grade—Imogene Canterbury, Marlyn Campbell, Beulah Self, Martha Arnold and Jeannette Baker.

Fifth grade—Paul Mills, John McCollister, Mary Hamilton, LeRoy Hamilton and Stella Mae.

Agnes Whitel, Eloise Lynn, Robert Cromley and Betty Brown. Harvey Winn entered this week. He comes from Duval.

Pupils making all one hundred in spelling last week: Eleanor Heffner, Esther Stewart, Ralph Ruh, and Wayne Waits.

The fifth grade had a Hallow'een party last week and an exhibit of vegetable dolls and pumpkin faces. Vegetable doll and Marilyn Hedger won first on her pumpkin face.

HIGHWAY PATROL TO START NEXT WEEK

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Acting under orders of O. W. Merrell, state highway director, 60 members of the Ohio highway patrol tonight will break a six-week period of intensive training prior to beginning active duty next Wednesday.

Trained and equipped at an initial cost of $55,000, the patrol represents Ohio's first step toward the enforcement of state speed and driver-age laws and the control of overloaded and improperly registered vehicles.

Following a week-end vacation, the patrol will re-assemble at Camp Perry on Monday morning to receive final equipment and instructions. The swearing-in ceremonies and review will be held on Wednesday morning, after which the men will leave for their stations in the six state districts.

District headquarters will be located in Toledo, Ravenna, Sidney, Delaware, Cambridge, and Chillicothe. Three substations have been established in each district. They are located as follows: Toledo district, Defiance, Findlay, and Bellevue; Ravenna district, Medina, Salem, and Geneva; Sidney district, Middletown, Lima, and Springfield; Delaware district, Marion, Mansfield, and Newark; Cambridge district, Wilmington, Portsmouth and Athens. Director Merrell estimated that the initial cost of the patrol has been more than made up by the owners of improperly registered vehicles who have hurried to make correct registrations prior to the functioning of the patrol.

Study Plan for "American Eden"

A plan for an America where youth would do all the work and age would loaf is being studied by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. The idea, envisioned by a 71-year-old woman, Mrs. Preston Martin, wife of a college professor, calls for a conscripted army of youth 12,000,000 strong between the ages of 18 and 26. This army would do all the nation's work and supply food, clothing, shelter and other necessities of life for all over 26—the retirement age. However, luxuries would have to be earned by those desiring them.

ATLANTA PAINTER DIES IN HOSPITAL

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at the Atlanta M. E. church, Rev. H. O. Harbaugh officiating, for Ernest Strope, 55, painter and well known through the community, who died in Columbus hospital, Wednesday, without regaining consciousness after being found in an automobile in his garage a week ago.

Mr. Strope is survived by his widow and two daughters, Miss Velma at home and Mrs. George Bettis of Atlanta.

Interment will be in Williamsport cemetery.

WORLD'S FAIR TO OPEN NEXT JUNE 1

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—A century of Progress exposition, now on its last week for this year, will reopen on June 1, 1934 with a collection of new shows and exhibits, President Roosevelt C. Dawes announced today.

Legislation necessary for reopening the world's fair has been assured to the management, Dawes declared.

Maj. Gen. Lenox R. Lohr disclosed that alterations will begin next spring when new lighting effects and new exhibits will be installed and the grounds rearranged.

Business and industrial leaders had urged the fair's continuation next season in the belief that it would assist in plans for national recovery.

TO BE orthodox, in every story in which a policeman figures, the said policeman should be an Irishman. Any departure from this is a violation of the traditions. Nevertheless, and all the conventions to the contrary, notwithstanding, the hero of this story is a policeman and not an Irishman. He is Scotch.

In my own defense let me state that there are such things in New York as policemen who are Scotch. For instance, I know a lieutenant at an uptown station-house who has an accent which suggests hot oat-meat gruel running out of a narrow-mouthed jug. But our hero here was not a lieutenant, but a partolman walking post in a Bronx precinct. However, before we introduce him it is necessary first to present the other principal character of the little tragedy.

That other character was Irish, but he was not on the force. He was an elderly civilian who had stopped on a stroll to watch a job of street repairing.

Three stories up above his head a housekeeper placed a large platter of corned beef and cabbage—a combination affectionately known in New York as "Red Mile"—on a front window ledge of her tenement. The ledge had a slant to it. The platter slid off and descending, struck the Hibernian bystander squarely on the head, bruising his scalp and covering him with the contents of the heavy dish.

He gave a loud cry of pain and astonishment and sank to the sidewalk. He was not badly hurt but he had suffered a severe shock. As sympathetic onlookers lifted him to a sitting posture the Scotch partolman ranged up alongside and took in the sight. "Well," he said, "I kenneed that all Irishmen were fond of corned beef and cabbage, but, laddy, you're the first one I ever knew to decorate himself with it."

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NOTES

Jimmy Plum of the fourth grade has transferred to the Mt. Sterling schools.

Our fourth grade is enjoying the use of its new library table. We have magazines on child life, news of the day, nature study, and travel.

In spelling we have been having a daily contest to see whether the boys have the most 100's or the girls. The girls have been in the lead so far.

The 4th grade has been writing stories on the topic, "Preparation for Winter." We have posted the best ones on our bulletin board. Later we will make a booklet to keep on our library table.

In geography we have been taking an imaginary trip from New York to San Francisco on the Lincoln Highway. We have made maps and put in the important rivers, cities, and other points of interest.

On Tuesday of Halloween week grade 4 enjoyed a Halloween party during the lunch hour, from 12 until 1 o'clock. We had Jack O-Lanterns, we dressed in costumes and had lunch together as each person brought his lunch to school.

We have chosen Wednesday morning exercises as the time for the fire prevention discussion. We bring in newspaper clippings telling of fire disasters and discuss their prevention.

The following fourth grade pupils have been neither absent nor tardy for the first two months of school: Nellie Lurcham, Everett Costlow, Dora Cramblitt, Mary Jane Higley, Ruby Meadows, Elmer Neff, William Pettibone, Eleanor Sark, Herbert Seymour, Joseph Staley, Florence Tigner, Dorothy Wellington.

The 7th and 8th grade boys will begin basket ball practice next week. They desire to schedule games with 7th and 8th grade teams of nearby schools.

The third grade enjoyed a Halloween party last Tuesday afternoon. Pupils of the third grade who have been on the Honor Roll for the first two months of the school year are: Mary Wilkins, Joan Tosca, Frank Hingle, Viola Ward.

Betty Hunt and Isabelle Hallen. The sixth grade chose Junior Neff as their new librarian for the month of November.

The first grade children invited their mother to attend their Halloween party Friday afternoon which was given in honor of the second grade. There were ten mothers present.

The first grade are studying different kinds of animals, in connection with this project they are constructing an animal book.

The Juniors chose class rings this week from samples submitted by different companies.

The class wishes to thank Mrs. Bowers for the flowers she lent them for decorating the Junior Room.

For the past few weeks the chemistry classes have been performing extra experiments. These consist of Natural Colors, Freezing a tumbler to a block of wood something from nothing, burning air, sympathetic ink, painting gold, beautiful crystal gardens, variety of flavors, conduction of phosphorus in Potassium chlorate carrying a flame in hands, dust explosion, serpent egg, burning water, a chemical sunset, trick sign painting, red, blue, yellow green and purple fire, blowing soap bubbles with hydrogen. These experiments performed by various chemicals proved very interesting as well as educational.

The Home Economics class was organized Nov. 3. The following officers were elected: President, Lila Hiles, vice president Evelyn Gerhart, secretary and treasurer, Charlotte Reese, and program committee Ruth Hoffman, Pauline Reese, Cora Ruth White, Esther Marie Ward and Leona Collard.

Peace in the Far East

THE suggestion of General Araki, Japanese minister of war, that Japan summon a far eastern peace conference in Tokyo before 1935 has a pleasing sound but needs to be looked at from several standpoints before passing judgment on its value.

There is no doubt that the Far East is a danger spot in world relations. Most of the major powers have vital interests there. This was recognized by implication by General Araki in the suggestion that the conference include, in addition to Japan, the United States, Great Britain, China, India, Russia, France, Holland and Manchuria.

Japan for the last several years has been actively pursuing a policy designed to give her a position of dominance in the Far East. Her methods have been at times ruthless and in hostile defiance of world opinion. She has gone so far as to violate treaties to which she has subscribed. The fact that the rest of the world has been too busy with big problems nearer home to give much attention to matters farther away may explain the ease with which she has carried forward her general purpose.

Even Tokyo must realize, though, that an accounting time eventually must come. The military and naval expansion plans upon which Japan is actively engaged lend force to this belief. Significant in this connection are the words of General Araki that if Japan failed to follow "the armament replenishment program and the second naval supplementary plan" the red figures in the budget will become black, but the prospect of establishing far eastern peace on an enduring basis will be lost, and the people of Asia, led by China, will become permanent servants of the white race.

In other words, she regards herself as custodian of the fate of the people of Asia, and sees the white races as a menace to the East.

What would be the purpose of the suggested peace conference? In general, it would be "stabilization of conditions in the Far East. But Japan's ideal of what would constitute stabilization might not agree with that of other powers. A hint of this was given in General Araki's assertion that the Kellogg and the Nine-Power treaties had proved defective, and were in need of revision.

These are the treaties Japan is charged with violating. The course she has followed in China. The general apparently would have the facts revised in a way that would legalize and give world approval to these violations.

The United States is eager to further peace in any part of the world, where it can do so without compromising its legitimate interests. Its participation in such a conference (as that suggested by General Araki) might be advisable, but it would be fully justified in being alert, to the danger of being drawn into a trap.

Who says the West has lost all its wooliness? Alkhart, Kan., citizens are asking the war department to establish a for there, for protection against the depredations of outlaws.

New Job for Uncle Sam

TOO many strange things in government have occurred recently to make almost any proposed departure from accepted principles seem unlikely.

Among the most recent suggestions is that the public schools of the nation be financed with federal funds. It was made by Dr. William Trufant Foster, of Newton, Mass., director of the Polak Foundation for Economic Research, in an address before the Central Ohio Teachers' association.

While definite in his prediction that a demand for this would be made by the people, he was indefinite as to when this would occur; but "some day," he was quoted as saying, it would come. "All over the country," he said, "the schools are being scuttled. Pinched taxpayers are crying loudly for economy, and harassed officials are striking out blindly, in any direction, to save money. The schools are the easiest place to start scuttling."

This pressing need for economy, he apparently thinks, will force the people to turn over the job of financing the schools to the federal government. How this would provide tax relief, he doesn't explain. Whether supported by the federal or state government, the money will have to come from taxes.

THAT'S MY BOY!

by FRANCIS WALLACE
 AUTHOR OF "HUDDLE"

SYNOPSIS

The old home town—tiny Athens in the midwest—is awaiting the return of its most celebrated son, "Big Jeff" Randolph, for two seasons a national football sensation at famous Thorndyke, one of the most historic of eastern universities. Thorndyke influences had lured Randolph east because he had been a high school grid marvel. On vacations, some of which he spent at home, Tommy (as he was known to his Mom and Pop and other admiring Athenians) was "the glass of fashion and the mould of form" and . . . an airy arbiter of household manners. Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the town's richest citizen, had been Tommy's high school friend but a rift had slowly come between them until the dazzling Thorndyke hero had become enamored of Elaine Winthrop, artist and millionaire's daughter. Two days before Christmas, Tommy notifies Mom that he will be unable to come home as he is to be the guest of Park Avenue friends; Athens abandons its banquet plans, and it was a somewhat sad holiday in the Randolph home with no other word from "my boy." . . . Next day Mom hears neighbors at the butcher's boasting of their generous children; she shows them a handsome beaded bag saying Tommy had sent it to her. Later she receives a fancy silk shawl from him . . . she means to keep it and wear it to his graduation.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

It was three or four days before Mom got things straightened up and back in their places again. The other neighbor ladies were busy at the same thing, Mom guessed, as they didn't take much time for a talk when any of them happened to meet. And the men-folks were always apt to be short-tempered after a big time like that, what with their sleep upset and none of them young as they used to be.

"Yes," Mrs. Johnson said, "only try and get them to admit it. When my Albert gets a haircut and shave he still thinks he's a sheik."

"As long as they don't try to act it, why it ain't so bad," Mrs. Flannigan added, "but I could murder my Pat when he takes one of his notions to run his beard on my face—my it's tough as a curdycomb."

"I said Mrs. Farrell, 'but you just got to humor 'em when they get frisky. I don't see you carrying your beaded bag, Mis' Randolph?"

The others moved over a little closer while pretending not to notice. Mom said, as though she had hardly paid any attention:

"No, I put it away for Tommy's graduation. I'll have to look swell when I go over there, you know."

"I should say you will," Mrs. Flannigan said, "among all them money'd people."

"Well, when my Joie graduates," said Mrs. Farrell, "I ain't goin' to make no fuss or feathers about it. I'll just go with what I got."

"Yes," said Mrs. Johnson, "but you're different from Mis' Randolph—your Joie don't play football."

"Huh," said Mrs. Farrell, "what good's that football goin' to do him when he gets out—anyhow, Mis' Randolph, I'd think that with two bags just the same you might use one every day."

Mom said: "What do you mean, two bags the same?"

"Why, you showed us the one Tommy sent from New York—and then I heard Pete bought you one, too."

Mom hesitated, while the others could hardly hold in. Then Mom said: "Who said Pete bought one?"

"Why, I just heard it around; didn't you tell me, Mis' Flannigan?"

gan?"

Mrs. Flannigan was flustered but gave Mrs. Farrell a dirty look while she tried to get out of it. "No, I didn't say exactly, or any thing like that."

Mom let her squirm for a minute, then she said: "Well, Mis' Flannigan, of course I ain't going to say anything, but I just imagine Julius would be pretty mad if he heard Myrtle was carrying store business outside."

"Myrt never said anything," Mrs. Flannigan claimed quickly.

"I ain't saying she did," Mom said, "but if it gets around that you're telling things from out the store, that's bound to go right back at Myrtle—you ought to be careful, Mis' Flannigan."

"Anyhow," Mrs. Farrell asked, the corners of her crooked mouth pulling up until she looked like a dog snarling, "how about the two bags?"

"Well," Mom answered slowly, "not that it's anybody's business but just so nobody don't lose any more sleep about it"—she was looking at Mrs. Johnson and Butcher Brown while she said it—"there is only one bag and Pete bought it from Myrtle at Julius's."

Mrs. Farrell looked at the other two with her sickly smile. They didn't know what to do because Mom was smiling, too.

"But," Mom said, "that was only the first present from Jeff."

"My lands," Mrs. Johnson gasped, while the other two looked at each other funny, "did he send you another one?"

"Yes, I guess he was afraid his first one—the real one—might get held up in the mail so he told Pete to get me one so I'd be sure to have one for Christmas. Then, just after I left here the other day, I found it at home."

Mrs. Johnson smiled at Mom, not looking at the other two, as if she had nothing to do with them. "But Mis' Randolph—why didn't you say something?"

Mom began looking under the glass at the meat. "Oh," she said, "I'm not one of them that likes to brag about what my children do for me. Cut me a nice piece of loin steak, Butcher—the best you've got." She began humming.

"Two presents," Mrs. Johnson marvelled; "not that I'm after information or anything, Mis' Randolph, but what was the other one?"

"Oh—just a fancy silk evening shawl from Fifth Avenue in New York. Just grind up that piece of the tail, Butcher."

"Wasn't that just grand of him?" Mrs. Johnson asked the other two.

"Now," Mom went on, "I suppose somebody'll want to know what Pete got me and what Jim got me, and what Uncle Louie and Cousin Emmy got me, and what I got them."

Mrs. Flannigan was smiling apologetically: "Now, Mis' Randolph, it ain't nothing like that at all. I knew all the time Tommy would never forget his mother."

"And whose business is it even if he did?" Mom asked, still not looking at Mrs. Farrell.

The other ladies were nervous and excited and Butcher Brown began talking about his four nephews and the appetite they had, to cover it up. Then the mailman put his head in the door.

"Who's on the pan, now?" he asked.

"Go on, you're the biggest gossip in town yourself," Mrs. Flannigan said, "how about some mail?"

"One letter for Mis' Randolph," he said, "from New York."

"Must be from Tommy," Mrs. Johnson said, with sugar in her voice.

"Nope," John said, "ain't from him—some girl's handwriting and it smells too sweet for Tommy. Here, smell it—pretty nice, huh?"

"Some of his rich friends, I bet," Mrs. Flannigan said.

Mom took the letter carefully. It was a large, gray envelope and it did smell sweet, like the garden she had always wanted. She put it in her apron pocket and gathered the folds of her shawl about her.

"This must be from the girl he was telling me about," Mom said.

"A new girl, huh?" Mrs. Johnson asked.

"Oh, I wouldn't say a steady," Mom explained, because she didn't want it to get around and make Dorothy feel bad, "she's an artist and she drew his picture."

"An artist?" Mrs. Flannigan said.

"Sure," Mrs. Johnson explained, "like the ones that draw the holy pictures."

"Well," said John, hitching his pack to his back, "she won't get any holy pictures from Tom."

"Go on, you," said Mrs. Johnson, "Tommy's a good boy, ain't he, Mis' Flannigan?"

"He sure is," Mrs. Flannigan replied with enthusiasm, "my lands, Mis' Randolph, what'll that young one of yours be into next?"

Mom smiled and took the letter home with her, leaving a disappointed gallery at Butcher Brown's. She was relieved, in a sense, glowing with a victory over the gossips and she left that now they couldn't say anything about the bag because none of them could get anything out of Pete; but she was nervous, too, because it had worried her, because it was over she left the effect of the strain. Mom was not as young as she used to be and she didn't like quarreling; it was only when it was forced on her that she took her part—and they had been after her all the time about something ever since Tommy dared to try to make a man of himself.

Well, Tommy Randolph was her son and she would protect him.

But what was in the letter?

Mom would have loved to have opened it at the store in front of all of them, just to make them mad; but she wasn't sure what was in it and she thought it best to pretend that getting a letter from one of Tommy's rich friends was nothing new or unusual. She heard quick steps from behind. Mrs. Flannigan came up.

"I'm all out of breath," she said, "trying to catch up with you, I just stayed long enough to tell that one what I thought of her."

"You shouldn't have bothered," Mom said.

"But the idea of her trying to throw the blame on me and Myrt," Mrs. Flannigan continued, swinging her gaunt frame along, "when she made up the whole thing her own self."

"I wouldn't be surprised," Mom said.

"She just tried to put two and two together. She saw that bag in the window and started to hintin' so I just asked Myrt, so I could shut her up."

"And what did Myrt say?" Mrs. Flannigan asked.

Mrs. Flannigan smiled. "Well, the fact is, I think I was just after information, she told me to just mind my own business because she never carried stuff out of the store—and that's the spittin' truth of it, Mis' Randolph."

"Of course," Mom replied, "it really isn't anything and a body shouldn't let themselves get bothered by gossips anyhow, but I am glad to know Myrtle is all right because she's so nice to help wait on you. Of course Julius always waits on me personal but he usually tells Myrtle to go get the things."

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor, Circleville Herald.
 Dear Sir:

It is the opinion of the writer—and his opinion is shared by scores of other residents of Circleville—that no adequate expression of appreciation has been given to the many excellent performances of the Circleville High School bands and their exceptionally able directors and their leaders.

The striking showings of these two musical organizations would do honor to a city much larger than ours, and the fact that these bands perform so well, and give so generously of their time and talents whenever there is need of their services, certainly should be a source of pride for all who call Circleville their home.

Why not give these young people "a great big hand" in The Herald and let them know that the good work they are doing is appreciated by the people of the city? Their efforts have been proven to be exceedingly worthwhile, and they deserve more than a few encouraging pats on the back. Cordially yours,
 Fred C. Clark.

AT THE GRAND
 At last Mack Sennett's super-feature comedy, "Hypnotized," is ready for the screen and will be presented next Saturday as the big World Wide feature at the Grand Theater.

Over one year's time was necessary for the preparation of the story alone and the best comedy constructions in Hollywood collaborated on the creation of the innumerable hilarious scenes.

AT THE CLIFTONA
 Edmund Lowe believes that an actor should have two careers. That's why he purchased himself a ranch in Northern California.

Lowe is featured with Nancy Carroll, Robert Armstrong, and Lew Cody in "I Love That Man," a Charles R. Rogers production for Paramount, which comes to the Cliftona Theater Friday and Saturday. It was directed by Harry Joe Brown. During a lull between scenes on the lot, he explained his idea.

"Because an actor's imagination must be constantly stimulated and can best be stimulated by contrast, it is wise for him to have another career that takes him away from the dazzle and glamour that surround him as an actor," said Lowe.

Besides, Lowe explained, an actor knows that the years will dim his drawing power as a star, and it's a good idea to have something to fall back upon when audiences turn fickle.

Sinusitis Is a Dangerous Disease

Serious Complications Frequently Follow If It Is Neglected

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
 United States senator from New York
 Former Commissioner of Health,
 New York City

MOST PERSONS are familiar with that disturbance known as "sinus disease". It is indeed a common affliction. Hardly a day passes that I do not receive an inquiry about this disorder.

Unfortunately few realize it can be prevented. It is important to prevent it, or to begin treatment as early as possible. When neglected the disease may result in serious complications.

Sinusitis, as its name implies, is an inflammation of the nasal sinuses. The sinuses are cavities in the bones of the head. They are connected with the inside of the nose by means of small passageways.

Each sinus is given a special name. The name usually corresponds to the bone in which it is located. For example, the "ethmoidal sinus" is located in the "ethmoid bone," and the "frontal sinus" is located in the "frontal bone."

Colds Often Cause It

"What causes sinusitis?" "Is it curable?" These are questions asked about this affliction.

Sinusitis can usually be traced to a head cold, to coryza, influenza or some other infectious disease. The germs of the infection reach one of the sinuses where they rapidly multiply and set up an inflammation. The sufferer complains of severe headache, pain in the face, discharge from the nose and throat, and difficulty in breathing through the nose.

The disease soon becomes chronic, largely because the sinuses are inaccessible to simple medications and local treatment. Then again, most victims of sinusitis neglect the disorder or rely upon patent medicines and ineffectual remedies. This is unfortunate because the soon accumulated within the sinuses and leads to poisoning of the whole system.

Dangerous Complications

In many instances neglected sinusitis may give rise to dangerous complications. The pus sometimes breaks through the walls of the sinuses, eventually reaching the eye, brain or the blood stream. When this occurs, expert medical attention is essential, because continued neglect may lead to a fatal outcome.

Sinusitis and the complications of sinusitis can be prevented by immediate medical care of the common cold. If you contract a cold do not regard it lightly. Rest in bed and if you do not improve consult with your doctor. If sinusitis develops do not rely upon home remedies but take and follow expert advice.

In a persistent case of sinusitis it may be advisable to operate upon the infected sinus and drain off the pus. Of course, this must be determined by the physician who will be guided by the conditions.

In most instances he will advise an X-ray picture. This will determine the extent of the infection. The physician then decides whether an operation is necessary.

In children, removal of infected tonsils and adenoids is beneficial and prevents further trouble. Every effort should be made to prevent repeated attacks of sinusitis and thus escape its undesirable complications.

MARYSVILLE vs. CIRCLEVILLE

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10th

The Last Game of the Season!

Beat Marysville!

High School Athletic Field

3:00 P. M.

Tomorrow, The Circleville Tigers meet their last foe of the season - Marysville High on the High school Athletic Field. To date, the team has not made a very good showing but they are anxious to close the season with a victory, so that is all the more reason why you should be on hand tomorrow to give the boys lots of added punch from the sidelines.

Coach Herberholz has been pointing to this game for the past couple of weeks and has his squad in top shape and every man ready to go. So, a thrilling game is assured for the last one and spectacular football will be the order of the day. Make extra effort to be there tomorrow afternoon at the opening whistle.

astrous season in which the Tigers have failed to win a single game. It begins at 3 p. m. on the high school field with McMath and Ross both of Columbus, officiating.

A pep rally was to be held this afternoon at the high school with the entire student body taking part. The band is expected to invade the up-town district immediately before the game.

The team has had several good workouts this week and Coach Herberholz is highly hopeful of knocking off Jerry Kingsmore's crew. The Marysville outfit is one team that the Tigers have been successful against in the last few years, so it is hoped it can be put on the Tiger side of the ledger.

Gaines Hill, playing his final year in a Tiger uniform, will captain the team on the field.

The Red and Black players have been working on blocking and tackling this week and in Wednesday's drill were showing much proficiency.

Coach Herberholz is not certain about his starting lineup.

SPORT BRIEFS

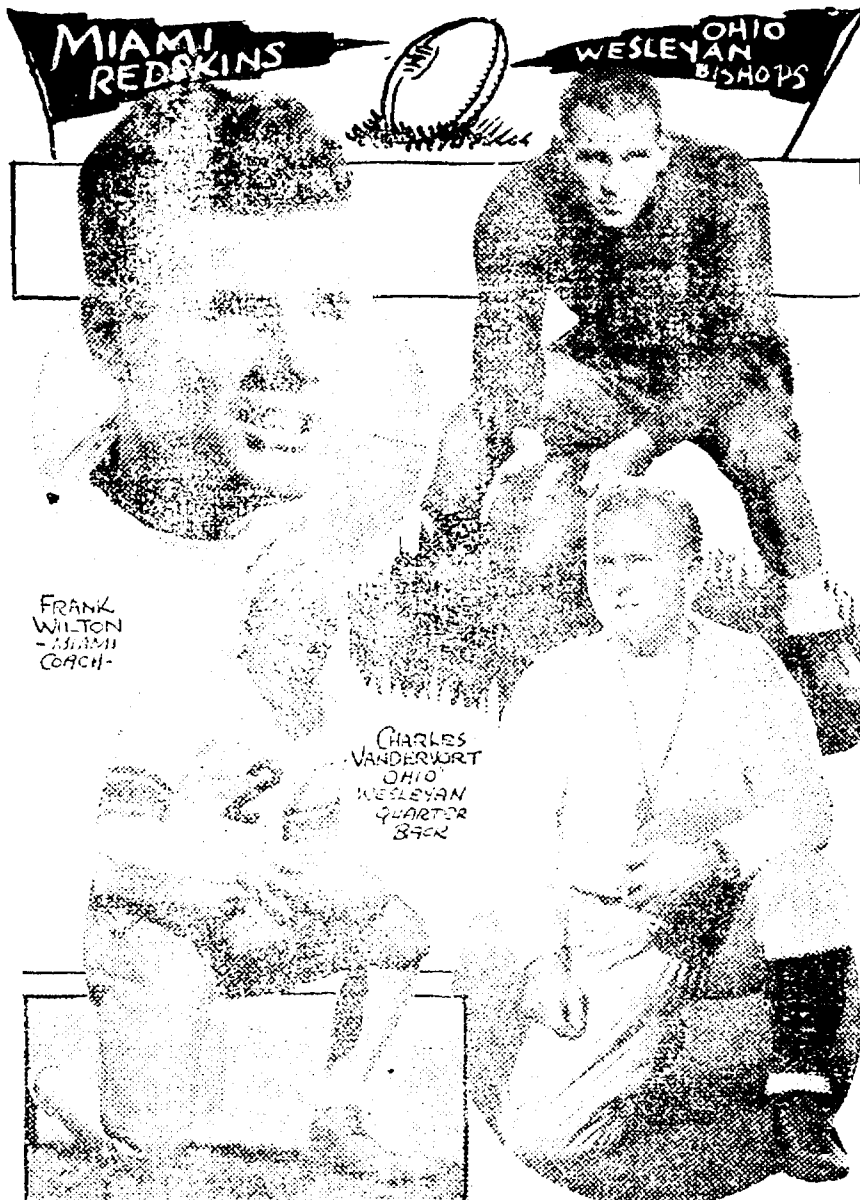

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 7. Princeton's experiment with changes in the line today in preparation for Dartmouth. Welter and Bliss replaced Kopte and John at the guards. The Tiger is showing proficiency in stopping Dartmouth plays.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 9. Yale was elated today over the attacking power shown by the varsity yesterday in scoring three times against the freshmen. An ever-sure toll of injuries makes the line-up uncertain for the Georgia game. Whitehead will be unable to play because of an infected foot. Nichols has developed a charley horse and De Angelis has a lame shoulder.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 9. Harvard coaches today tried to strengthen the defense of the Crimson against the Warner attack as staged by the Army. Nearly 50,000 have already bought tickets to see the Harvard play the cadets.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 9. The Army squad, 38 strong, leaves here this afternoon for Cambridge. The cadet corps will leave here Friday night. Four special trains will carry the 1,300 cadets and the military academy band.

Football strategy will be matched by the four men shown here with next Saturday at Delaware when Ohio Wesleyan and Miami tangle in a Buckeye conference battle that will eliminate one of the other four further consideration in the race for the championship.

GREEN BAY TO TEST SPARTANS IN OHIO TOWN

Joe Kurth, of Notre Dame Fame, Proving Builwark In Packers' Line.

PORTSMOUTH, Nov. 9. Ohio's strongest football team, Portsmouth Spartans, who have been going quietly about the task of pushing over enemy eleven while their rivals, Chicago Bears, have been monopolizing the National League spotlight, stand a fine chance of winning the World's gridiron championship. Just how big that chance is will be better known next Sunday afternoon, when the Portsmouth "iron-men" engage their bitter rivals, Green Bay Packers, at University Stadium. The kick-off will take place at 2:30 p. m.

After last Sunday's battle with New York, Coach Clark, Portsmouth's diminutive mentor, had little hope for a Spartan victory over the Packers next Sunday afternoon all because three star backs were placed on the injured list.

CRIPPLES READY

But Mister Clark has now allowed a faint smile to break his prevailing pessimism for his crippled boys are back in uniform. That means the Spartans trek to the flood-wall stadium full strength, determined to trim the Packers and gain revenge for the 17 to 0 defeat given them earlier in the season at Green Bay.

Such a feat will tax the Spartans to the limit. Green Bay's stock has boomed considerably since early schedule defeats, having claimed a strong Cardinal eleven their latest victim, defeating them at Chicago last Sunday, 14-6.

Portsmouth gridirers have been drilled during the past week in the art of breaking up forward passes. Green Bay's chief mode of attack, the Packers have two expert passers in Herber and Engelman, alternating halfbacks, and a pair of fine receivers in Johnny Blood and Lavvne Dilweg, the former a back and the latter an end.

That Coach Curley Lambeau will turn these men loose instead of trying to pound along on the ground through the strong Spartan forward wall is almost a foregone conclusion.

KURTH TO START
Green Bay's probable starting line-up will be Dilweg and Rose, ends; Hubbard and Kurth, tackles; Michalske and Evans, guards; Bultman, center; Blood and Herber, halfbacks; and Hinkle, fullback, with Grove calling signals at quarterback.

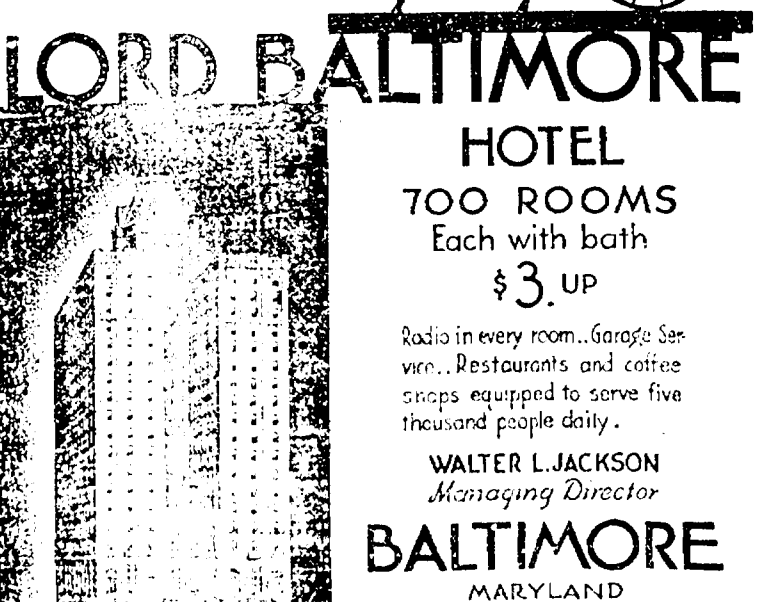

Recreation Accidents
Accidents on the baseball field, mostly on the amateur field, are more numerous than any other kind of recreation accidents, even more than swimming and bathing.

Art Lane, Princeton football captain, should know how to handle an eleven for he is the eldest of eleven children of John J. Lane of Arlington, Mass. The Tiger leader is 22 and plays at tackle. He broke his collarbone in the Columbia game last year and was out for much of the season.

RUBBER DOLLARS

HOW OFTEN have you and friend wife wondered how "the Joneses" seemed to do so much on their income? From remarks dropped by Jones, you're almost certain you earn as much as he. You're dead certain you and your wife are not extravagant or wasteful. Yet the Joneses do little things you can't afford — and have little things for which you can't spare the money. How come?

The truth is that Joneses have a secret. They have discovered a way of putting rubber into dollars. Through the knowledge of this secret they have learned that a dollar can be stretched beyond its ordinary buying limits

What is the secret? They read the advertisements!

In the advertisements in this newspaper, reliable merchants and manufacturers offer you their finest values. Before going to the store to buy, shop here first. Compare products until you've found just what you want. Compare prices until you've pleased your purse. You'll save endless hours of weary walking. And you'll buy with the comforting assurance that every dollar has done its duty!

Leading Women's Organizations Put Strength Behind Recovery Campaign

There is every indication that the great masses of the women of the United States are standing loyally behind the Government's drive to end unemployment and the depression. Mrs. Mary G. Morris, member of the local NRA committee, said today.

"Reports and messages" reaching local NRA headquarters from Washington, said Mrs. Morris "indicate that women's organizations all over the country are officially going on record with whole-hearted endorsement of the special efforts being sponsored by Uncle Sam to find jobs for the unemployed and the distress brought about by the business slump. Recently Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, with a membership of 2,000,000, returned to her home in Washington after a four weeks speaking campaign on behalf of the Recovery program. She traveled over a number of states in the West and Southwest. Everywhere she found women more optimistic and more willing to patiently await eventual good from the NRA. She stated that women in Wyoming, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, New Mexico, Nebraska, Colorado and Texas are taking an active, intelligent interest, and are loyally patronizing the shops and industries lined up with NRA.

"And in the same spirit the Idaho State Federation of Women's Clubs at its recent convention adopted a resolution approving the National Recovery Act. The Michigan State Council of the United States Daughters of 1812 at their recent convention in Detroit unanimously pledged its influence for support of the National Recovery Act. The Rochester Diocesan Council of the National Council of Catholic Women at a convention assembled at Rochester passed resolutions expressing their satisfaction at the achievements which the NRA has already effected, especially in the re-employment of over 3,000,000 wage earners and the outwearing of child labor. The Council pledged its fullest support and cooperation to the Government to the end that social injustice be abolished throughout the land. And the Missouri Daughters of the American Revolution were among the many other women's organizations to go on record officially as working under the banner of the Blue Eagle. Also a number of the chapters of the Women of the Moose of California have gone on record recently in endorsing the NRA."
